OVER 90% OF LOCAL AUTHORITIES DEPEND UPON OUR ADVICE.

Over 85 years ago, Municipal Mutual was formed specifically to bring down the cost of insurance for local authorities. Today, our help is more vital than ever. We have the experience. We have the understanding. And we have a network of 17 offices around the country.

We're still a mutual company, with no shareholders to satisfy. And we still deal direct, without paying commissions to intermediaries. We have specialists who will help you reduce your risks. And we give free advice on any insurance matters.

Over 400 of our major local authority customers qualify for a free computer and participation in our Muni-Link system, with instant keyboard access to regional offices.

Name another insurance company which would do that! We can't think of one. But then, providing a total and innovative service to local authorities is our trademark.

For more details please call 071-222 7933.

Now there is a sensible alternative to tying up capital in fixed assets.

Asset Finance?

We can prepare a structured package designed to optimise available funds without distorting your balance sheet and which will enhance cashflow and other performance ratios by removing the financial problems associated with ownership

You name it and we can arrange to supply it to you in return for an "all up" rental fee each month including maintenance, where appropriate over a fixed period. Existing assets can also be acquired and rented back to you in the same way.

How can we do this? Because we are part of a National Group which already has immense experience in providing cost effective financing alternatives for commercial vehicle and specialised plant to the private and public sectors.

Why not telephone the number below and find out how we can simplify your asset financing problems?

The Institute of Company Accountants

In September 1990 The Society of Company and Commercial Accountants changed its name to The Institute of Company Accountants – the name of one of the three constituent bodies which merged memberships in 1974 to form the Society. The Institute was incorporated initially in 1928. Members of the Institute occupy accounting and wider executive positions at all levels of seniority, many also are lecturers. Those in public practice specialise in providing accountancy and taxation services for smaller businesses and private individuals.

Admission to membership is only by examination. For further information please contact the Secretary-General.

Hitachi CADCore™/Hybrid...

A major breakthrough in PC-based document conversion and design software.

With most of today's AM/FM and GIS systems, it's not always easy to get from point A to point B. Many don't address the document conversion dilemma. Ordinary conversion software requires time-consuming 'clean-up' after batch-processed raster to vector conversion. The Hitachi response: CADCore™/Hybrid. This revolution in software offers full-featured vector design (CAD) and fully integrated raster scanning and editing, Tracer, a special feature of CADCore/Hybrid, speeds the conversion process.

This combination of raster-vector processing and the Tracer feature offers you the important benefit of incremental conversion: only the required details of a drawing or map need be converted. CADCore/Hybrid is compatible with most existing AM/FM, GIS and CAD system standard formats. Plus, open architecture and software development tools allow for total customisation.

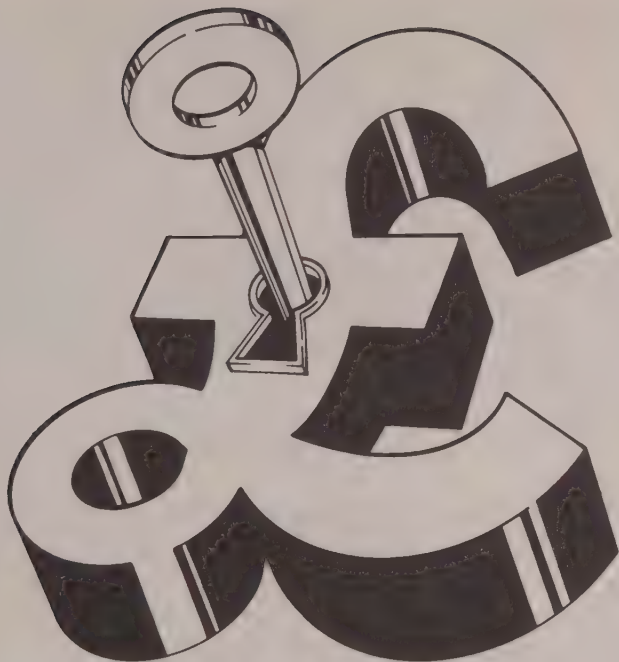

The result: a software breakthrough that's easily adaptable and greatly reduces or eliminates tedious, time-consuming manual digitising to yield substantial cost, time and labour savings.

A cost-effective PC software solution for:

- Central Government Departments
- Local Government Departments
- County Council Departments
- District Council Departments
- Water Distribution Companies
- Electricity Companies
- Gas Companies
- AM/FM & GIS Bureaux
- Consultancies
- System Developers
- End users.

The local authority authority.

Hill Samuel Investment Management has, in all, £3bn of local authority funds under management and advice.

In this year's "Financial Weekly" Survey we were named as one of the top performing companies, over the last 3 years. This achievement was due to our strong balanced and specialist management capabilities.

But it isn't just our pension fund skills that has established our authority in public sector finance. It is also specific expertise such as property and cash management – both very relevant to local authorities.

And our commitment to understanding the very particular requirements of the public sector, including the setting up of a team specially trained and briefed to service our clients.

If you would like to talk about any aspect of local authority investment, phone Jennie Paterson on 071-638 1774 or write to us at the address below.

COUNTY COUNCILS

The Local Government Act 1972 abolished from 1st April, 1974 the 45 and 13 county councils in England and Wales respectively and created:

6 Metropolitan County Councils	}	in England
39 Non-Metropolitan County Councils
8 Non-Metropolitan County Councils		in Wales

The metropolitan county councils of Greater Manchester, Merseyside, South Yorkshire, Tyne and Wear, West Midlands and West Yorkshire ceased to exist from 1 April 1986 under the Local Government Act 1985.

The boundaries of many of the non-metropolitan counties in England are virtually the same as those of the counties they replaced but some major changes were effected to create five new counties.

In Wales, Glamorgan was divided into three new non-metropolitan counties and the remaining twelve former counties were merged to create another five non-metropolitan counties; thus the number of Welsh counties was reduced from thirteen to eight.

Elections

County councils consist of a chairman and councillors. A county is divided into electoral divisions, each after 1977 returning one councillor elected for a term of four years. The first election to the new county councils took place on 12th April, 1973 and the next was held on 5th May, 1977, on and after which newly elected county councillors come into office on the day their predecessors retire. Subsequent elections will be every fourth year, and thus the next one will be in May, 1993.

DISTRICT COUNCILS IN THE COUNTY

Bath (City), Bristol (City), Kingswood (Borough), Northavon, Wansdyke, Woodspring.

TOPOGRAPHY

The County of Avon, the most populous part of the South West region, has some 950,000 residents within 520 square miles. In recent times the country has experienced a modest rate of population growth. Its boundaries largely reflect natural geographical features with the Cotswolds escarpment to the east, the Mendip Hills to the south and the Severn estuary to the west.

The County includes the cities of Bristol and Bath and the resort town of Weston-super-Mare. The principal concentration of population is the Bristol conurbation comprising the city, and parts of Kingswood and Northavon Districts. This built-up area, contained by green-belt policy accommodates well over half the population and about three-quarters of the estimated 450,000 jobs.

Structure Plan policies are continuing to direct much of the new housing growth to undeveloped land in areas contained by the green belt, although development also is taking place at Weston-super-Mare and in many of Avon's smaller towns.

Avon's economic structure has seen significant recent changes and, despite declines in some traditional manufacturing, it remains diverse and prosperous. Tobacco, printing, packaging and publishing remain important, but aerospace and defence activities are particularly significant; the associated local skills available are helping to attract new generation "high-technology" enterprises and inward investment.

The long-standing commercial activities are expanding, accompanied by a dramatic growth in national and regional services attracted to the area. Avon is now the largest financial and insurance services centre in England, outside London.

The two universities of Bristol and Bath, together with the regional Polytechnic, have strengthened Avon's role as a centre for further education and training and for a wide range of industrial research and development activities.

The County contains the intersection of the M4/M5 motorways which each traverse the area, and it includes the Severn Bridge link to South Wales. A second Severn road crossing it to be built shortly. Avon therefore serves as an important distribution centre serving the South West region and parts of South Wales and the Midlands. There are excellent rail communications with other parts of the country including fast and frequent Inter City 125 services to and from London and a "park and ride" mainline station at Bristol Parkway supplementing the traditional rail stations of central Bristol, Bath and Weston.

Avon has many recreational and rural attractions including coastal resorts and attractive countryside, including parts of the Cotswolds and Mendips Areas of Outstanding Beauty. Apart from the great attraction of Bath as a tourist centre, tourism is of growing importance throughout the County.

DISTRICT COUNCILS IN THE COUNTY

Luton (B), Mid Bedfordshire, North Bedfordshire (B), South Bedfordshire.

TOPOGRAPHY

Within the county are the areas of North Bedfordshire Borough, Mid Bedfordshire and South Bedfordshire Districts and Luton Borough. The county boundaries were unaltered as a result of local government reorganisation in 1974 except for the inclusion of the former Luton County Borough.

Bedfordshire is a compact county rich in beauty and history, its attractions including stately homes and gardens, country parks and nature reserves. In the south there is an Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty and in the north the River Ouse is now navigable from Bedford to the sea. Of the many places of historical and architectural interest the best known are those associated with John Bunyan.

DEVELOPMENT

The county has a thriving local economy and good communications to London and other parts of the country. In recent years it has experienced rapid growth, resulting in new shopping, employment and housing developments. The County Council's policy is to control this growth and preserve and protect Bedfordshire's heritage.

Employment in manufacturing industries is substantially above the average for England and Wales. Most of the County's biggest manufacturers are multi-national companies. Mineral extraction is also a major activity, as is agriculture. The County's economic base is becoming more diversified and the size of the service sector has grown rapidly. Several important research establishments are located in Bedfordshire.

DISTRICT COUNCILS IN THE COUNTY

Bracknell Forest (B), Newbury, Reading (B), Slough (B), Windsor and Maidenhead (Royal B), Wokingham.

TOPOGRAPHY

The county is dominated by the River Thames which has contributed so much to its history. Its county town Reading, has always been a centre of communications and Berkshire's central situation in the South accounts for its varied development and very active economy.

Although there is some evidence of prehistoric and Roman settlements in the county, it was the Norman Conquest, the Reformation and the Industrial Revolution which were to influence Berkshire's future most. William the Conqueror began work on Windsor Castle and so established a royal connection in the county; the dissolution of the monasteries released large areas of land for agriculture; construction of the Kennet and Avon Canal and the Great Western Railway made the county a focus of communications in the south of England, generating growth in trade and commerce. More recently the M4 motorway has produced a second communications revolution in Berkshire significantly affecting the speed and nature of the county's development.

The Berkshire countryside provides rich arable and dairy farming land, but the industrial and commercial growth of Reading added to that of Slough, and the development of the electronics industry in Bracknell, Wokingham and other parts of the county has brought a diversity of employment. Central Berkshire in particular has been the scene of intense development over the last 15 years. However, the west of the county is essentially rural and Newbury and its surrounding towns and villages serve a large agricultural community and the thriving horse-racing industry, as well as providing homes for people working in Reading and beyond.

Large parts of Berkshire enjoy protection as Metropolitan Green Belt or part of the North Wessex Downs Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty, and there is unspoiled countryside within easy reach of all the main urban centres. The County Council has developed strategic planning policies aimed at maintaining the balance between an active local economy and the protection of this attractive environment.

The motorway network (especially the M4 and now the M25), together with excellent rail links and the proximity of Heathrow Airport, mean that Berkshire enjoys highly developed national and international communications. This is reflected in the county's exceptionally high levels of car ownership and traffic growth. A major investment programme in transport infrastructure is under way, using public and private funds, to bring the level of provision into line with the demands generated by recent and committed development.

The River Thames, of course, attracts many holidaymakers and boating enthusiasts and the superb countryside offers excellent opportunities for walkers, horse-riders and golfers. Other attractions include Ascot, Newbury and Windsor race courses, and a number of towns and villages of historical interest. Windsor, with its Castle and extensive recreation facilities, is one of the most popular tourist attractions in Britain.

TOPOGRAPHY

Buckinghamshire is largely rural in character but is also a county of many contrasts.

It stretches from the outer suburbs of Greater London in the south to the quiet rural communities of the north and west and lies mostly between two of the country's great rivers—the Thames and the Great Ouse.

It also contains the new city of Milton Keynes, the fastest growing new town in Britain, which is based largely upon Bletchley, Wolverton and Stony Stratford, and is destined to grow from its original 40,000 population to over 200,000 by the turn of the century.

In the southern part of Buckinghamshire the county is blessed with a major portion of the Chilterns, which is nationally designated an Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty. Much of this forms the Metropolitan Green Belt which was created to help stop the outward spread of Greater London and growing pressure for homes in the area from London commuters. In Buckinghamshire the belt is 30 kilometres wide and covers an area of nearly 500 square kilometres.

The County's three main centres of High Wycombe, Aylesbury and Milton Keynes serve the southern, central and northern areas of the county respectively.

DISTRICT COUNCILS IN THE COUNTY

Cambridge (City), East Cambridgeshire, Fenland, Huntingdonshire, Peterborough (City), South Cambridgeshire.

TOPOGRAPHY

The county, which covers more than 1,300 square miles and contains some of the richest agricultural land in Britain, stretches from near the Lincolnshire town of Stamford in the north to Royston in Hertfordshire in the south, and from St. Neots in the west to Ely in the east. It is bounded by eight counties.

The county's main centres of population are the world famous university city of Cambridge and the rapidly developing new town of Peterborough. Other principal centres include the expanding towns of Huntingdon and St. Neots, the cathedral city of Ely and the inland port of Wisbech.

Although there has been increasing housing, commercial and industrial development in recent years in the western half of the county, particularly in Peterborough and the Ouse Valley towns, Cambridgeshire remains predominantly rural. Farmers own or control more than 80 per cent of the land in the county (compared to the average of 70 per cent in England and Wales) and the quality of the area's arable farming is internationally recognised.

Industrially it has a similar reputation for the work of the specialised medical, pharmaceutical, agricultural, scientific and technological research and development agencies and organisations which are located in the county.

To the casual visitor the countryside is unspectacular by national standards. The flat nature of the landscape and the dearth of trees—Cambridgeshire is the least wooded of the English counties—are the most often noted features, but closer inspection reveals a great deal of individual character and charm.

The Huntingdon district consists mainly of modest rolling country broken by the valleys of the Great Ouse and Nene and their tributaries and the terrain slopes gradually from the limestone uplands of the west to the low lying Fenlands in the north east. The north western part of the county is dominated by developing Peterborough and whilst the surrounding countryside is undramatic the western half is pleasantly undulating and well wooded.

Unlike the flat rural areas north of Cambridge there is a stretch to the south of the city, from Newmarket to Gamlingay where a whole range of landscaped parklands have been established over the past few centuries. Many of the villages in this area are of considerable architectural character.

DISTRICT COUNCILS IN THE COUNTY

Chester (City), Congleton (B), Crewe and Nantwich (B), Ellesmere Port and Neston (B), Halton (B), Macclesfield (B), Vale Royal (B), Warrington (B).

TOPOGRAPHY

Cheshire is a county of contrasts, reflected on the one hand in its incomparable natural heritage of rural beauty and historic interest and on the other in its varied and highly-gearred range of industry and commerce all set in an outstanding environment and quality of life.

Located in England's North West, Cheshire is bounded by Merseyside, Greater Manchester, Derbyshire, Staffordshire and Shropshire with the county town of Chester lying close to the Welsh national boundary.

Cheshire's geographic features include the rugged Pennine foothills to the east, the attractive sandstone ridge running from the Mersey estuary into neighbouring Staffordshire, and the flat Cheshire plain with its incomparable countryside. The Rivers Mersey, Dee and Weaver, and the Manchester Ship Canal flow through the county and a network of canals join to form the renowned Cheshire ring.

During the 1960's and 1970's Cheshire was among the fastest growing of all English counties and although that growth has now slowed down, the present estimated population of 960,500 is expected to pass one million by about 1996.

Cheshire's main industries are as established as they are well-known. Agriculture, chemicals and salt have been complemented by vehicle manufacture, research, technology, brewing and other diverse industrial activity.

Eight districts, each with their own council, make up the county's administrative framework with the county authority being based in Chester itself.

Looking briefly around Cheshire's districts, Chester has a strong historic influence while Warrington and Halton include areas which became part of Cheshire as a result of local government reorganisation in 1974.

Both Runcorn and Warrington have benefited from the extensive developments associated with the New Town Development Corporation while Crewe has experienced major change resulting from varied industrial development and an impressive urban renewal scheme.

Ellesmere Port and Neston continues to rely on the petro-chemical industry and vehicle manufacture while Vale Royal and Congleton have been constantly engaged in a quest to attract new industry in order to help them diversify from their traditional industrial base.

"The county as a whole is continuing to benefit from an expanding and increasingly prosperous tourist industry which has reinforced Cheshire's reputation as a county with many attractions for visitors.

Overall the County Council's role continues to be one of providing, maintaining and developing services for the benefit of its people and the continued prosperity of Cheshire. That must remain the priority.

DISTRICT COUNCILS IN THE COUNTY

Hartlepool (B), Langbaurgh-on-Tees (B), Middlesbrough (B), Stockton-on-Tees (B).

TOPOGRAPHY

Though compact in size, Cleveland is a county of contrasts. It has vast industrial complexes near the mouth of the River Tees but its boundaries, a few miles away, run through farmland, seaside resorts and the hills of the North York Moors National Park.

The industrial revolution of the 19th Century converted the area from sparsely populated pastureland to one of the prime sources of Britain's Victorian prosperity. Ironmaking, pioneering work in steelmaking, shipbuilding and the introduction of the railway age with the opening of the Stockton and Darlington Railway shaped its character.

New challenges in recent years have been met by transforming its industrial base. Cleveland now has one of the largest petro-chemical complexes in Europe, has the third most important port in Britain (Teesport), is a major steel-producing centre using the newest techniques, is the point where oil from the Ekofisk field in the North Sea is piped ashore and, at the same time, is broadening its economic base by attracting smaller industrial and commercial firms. Communications by road, rail, sea and air have developed to keep pace with the industrial change.

Yet the county retains its natural attractions. Within a few minutes travelling time from the heart of the urban area are quiet villages and market towns like Yarm and Guisborough whose history goes back long before the first industrial revolution. Broad sandy beaches run along the eastern boundary of the county. The rolling moors of the national park are within easy reach.

TOPOGRAPHY

Cornwall is a rural and maritime county in the south west region of England. The county is situated at the western end of the south west peninsula and is surrounded by sea except on its eastern boundary with Devon where the River Tamar forms a natural divide. This geographical position has ensured that Cornwall has remained until relatively recently one of the more remote and isolated parts of Britain. Consequently the county has maintained much of its own identity in traditions and culture. The distinctive physical features of the county are found in its peninsular form, long indented coastline, granite moorlands and temperate climate.

Despite a very long history of mining, a century of growth as a holiday area, and the more recent and continuing development of manufacturing industry, Cornwall remains essentially rural in character. The county contains a wide scatter of small towns and villages, only one third of the population lives in towns of over 10,000 inhabitants compared with four fifths in England and Wales. Farming is still the mainstay of the economy over much of the county and agriculture is the predominant land use. Much of the countryside and the varied coastline is of high landscape value and many towns and villages retain an attractive and relatively unspoilt appearance. Certain of the uplands and much of the coastline have a considerable importance as wildlife habitats, due to the climate and location of the county. There are also a large number of sites of great interest to the archaeologist and historian which remain relatively undisturbed.

DISTRICT COUNCILS IN THE COUNTY

Allerdale, Barrow-in-Furness (B), Carlisle (City), Copeland (B), Eden, South Lakeland.

TOPOGRAPHY

Cumbria's most immediate attraction lies in its scenery, containing as it does the whole of the Lake District National Park, part of the Yorkshire Dales National Park, Solway Coast, North Pennines, Hadrian's Wall and other outstanding areas. The hinterlands of industrial areas are all within a few minutes walk of open countryside. In land area Cumbria is England's second largest county, although one of the least populated, containing about 0.2 people per acre of land which contrasts with the comparable figure for England and Wales of 1.3.

Whilst agriculture/forestry and tourism feature extensively throughout the County, it also has many other diverse industrial interests, e.g. Vickers, Albright & Wilson, B.N.F.L., B.S.C., Pirelli.

The M6 Motorway passes through the centre of the county providing a fast north-south route to other parts of the country. The Motorway has links with the A74 (Carlisle to Glasgow), the A66 (Workington to Teesside), the A69 (Carlisle to Tyneside) and the A65 (Kendal to Leeds) roads. The main west coast electrified railway line between London, Birmingham and Glasgow also passes through the heart of the county, providing fast direct services with important business centres. Other direct inter-city trains from Carlisle serve Tyneside, Yorkshire and the East Midlands, whilst local services connect the Cumbria coast to the main line network.

The most heavily concentrated areas in terms of population and industry are Carlisle, Kendal, the western coast (Maryport-Workington-Whitehaven) and Barrow-in-Furness. Technical and Further Education Colleges at Carlisle, Workington, Whitehaven, Kendal and Barrow co-operate with industry in providing courses geared to local needs whilst agriculture is served by the Cumbria College of Agriculture and Forestry. In addition to the main population centres the County has several smaller but interesting towns which provide shopping and service facilities, e.g. Penrith, Appleby-in-Westmorland, Wigton, Cockermouth, Keswick, Windermere, Ulverston, Grange-over-Sands.

DISTRICT COUNCILS IN THE COUNTY

Amber Valley, Bolsover, Chesterfield (B), Derby (City), Derbyshire Dales, Erewash (B), High Peak (B), North East Derbyshire, South Derbyshire.

TOPOGRAPHY

It is not only Derbyshire's scenery which provides so much contrast but its industry too alters markedly from district to district. Much of the north-west forms part of England's first National Park, the Peak Park, and tourism is a key industry.

Apart from the villages and towns in the National Park, towns near its border such as Buxton and Matlock are popular tourist centres and able to offer their own attractions. At Buxton there is the renowned Crescent, built by John Carr of York for the Fifth Duke of Devonshire between 1780 and 1784.

Derbyshire maintains many ancient customs and traditions, probably the most famous of which is well dressing, which is peculiar to the county. Its origins are unknown, possibly pagan, but later adopted by Christianity as an act of thanksgiving for plentiful water supplies.

Apart from tourism, farming is a leading industry, and in its various forms is important in most parts of the county. Dairy farming tends to predominate over crop farming. On a picturesque showground adjoining the River Wye at Bakewell the staging of one of the largest two-day agricultural shows in the country takes place. The Annual County Agricultural Show is held at Spondon near Derby.

Derbyshire has been the scene of many important industrial advances. Two hundred years ago Sir Richard Arkwright opened the world's first successful water-powered cotton spinning mill on the banks of the River Derwent at Cromford, near Matlock. The mill, which represented one of the most important steps of the Industrial Revolution, still stands.

Quarrying and coal mining are long-established industries which like other industries relying on mineral wealth, makes an important contribution to the county's economy.

Many buildings in Derbyshire are, not unnaturally, constructed from local stone including some of the fine country houses. In fact, a number of Derbyshire country houses enjoy international fame and possibly none more so than Chatsworth, country seat of the Duke of Devonshire. Nearby is Haddon Hall, perhaps the most complete and authentic example of a medieval manor in England. In east Derbyshire Hardwick Hall was built in the late 16th century and there is a fine 17th-century Castle at Bolsover. Nearby Sutton Scarsdale Hall, survives merely as a preserved building "shell".

Also in the north-east is the smaller Barlborough Hall, a fine example of Elizabethan architecture and now a Catholic Boys' School. Melbourne Hall, south of Derby, is another house in a beautiful setting rich in period furniture and art treasures as is Kedleston Hall, a Georgian home designed partly by Robert Adam.

In Creswell Crags in the north-east is one of the two earliest known settlements of man in the British Isles. Stone circles survive at Stanton Moor, Arbor Low and on Harthill Moor, where there are traces of an Iron-Age fort.

TOPOGRAPHY

Devon is one of the biggest counties in Britain. In area it is the third largest county in England and Wales and has the greatest length of roadway—over 13,000 kilometres.

Devon is bordered on the east by Somerset and Dorset and on the west by Cornwall. Its steep and rugged north coast meets the Bristol Channel; the more sheltered beaches and ports of the south coast face the English Channel. The county town is Exeter, where the County Council has its headquarters.

The naval history of Devon is legendary. Drake, Gilbert, Raleigh and Frobisher are among the county's great Elizabethan seamen. The tradition continues at Plymouth where the Royal Navy still operates a large base.

The county has two national parks. Dartmoor and Exmoor (partly in Somerset), and its fine beaches and attractive thatched villages help make it the most popular holiday area in Britain. Tourism and agriculture are its main sources of income.

Audit by District Auditor. (No. 6 Audit District)

DISTRICT COUNCILS IN THE COUNTY

Bournemouth (B), Christchurch (B), East Dorset, North Dorset, Poole (B), Purbeck, West Dorset, Weymouth and Portland (B).

TOPOGRAPHY

Topography comprises some of the most attractive landscapes in Britain. Most of West Dorset and the Purbeck area have been designated Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty. There are eight National Nature Reserves at Arne-Reedbeds, Hartland Moor, Holton Heath, Hog Cliff, Holt Heath, Stoborough Heath, Morden Bog and Studland Heath, together with numerous sites of special scientific interest.

Topography is varied, ranging from the Chalk Downs covering most of Central/North East Dorset, the Jurassics of West and South Dorset and the Tertiaries of the Hampshire Basin, in the east of the county. There are several unique geological features, particularly along the interesting coastline, most notable at Chesil beach and Lulworth Cove.

There are many historic features of interest in Dorset. The Chalk Downs in particular are a rich source of pre-Christian archaeological features in the form of earthworks, tumuli and forts, the most famous being Maiden Castle near Dorchester and Badbury Rings near Blandford.

There are also many historic towns, e.g. Blandford, Sherborne, Lyme Regis and Dorchester.

The spectrum of economic activity in Dorset is broad. Although the traditional strength of agriculture is still evident in much of the landscape manufacturing industry is well established especially in the eastern part of the County of which a thriving micro-electronics industry forms part. Commerce, banking and insurance companies are also prominent, and a number of firms have located their national headquarters in the area. Weymouth too has a growing manufacturing sector, although continuing to develop as a centre for holidays and water sports. The attractions of a beautiful coastline, carefully protected under coastal conservation policies, have ensured the continuing success of this and the other family resorts of Swanage, Bridport and Lyme Regis as well as the internationally famous Bournemouth. Tourism is thus an important element in the local economy, but also significant are the large defence establishments at Portland, Bovington and Blandford and the Atomic Energy Research Establishment at Winfrith. Finally the older extractive industries for sand and gravel, ball clay and Portland and Purbeck stone are now rivalled by the developing oil wells in Purbeck and Poole Harbour. Road and rail links to London and the rest of the country are good and passenger ferry services to France and the Channel Islands operate from Poole.

As regards amenities, several are of national significance, such as the village of Milton Abbas, Abbotsbury Swannery, Compton Acres Gardens, Poole, Corfe Castle, Brownsea Island, Portland Bill and Lulworth Cove.

Historic buildings—Athelhampton House, Sherborne Castle, Kingston Lacey House, etc.

DISTRICT COUNCILS IN THE COUNTY

Chester-le-Street, Darlington (B), Derwentside, Durham (City), Easington, Sedgefield, Teesdale, Wear Valley.

TOPOGRAPHY

The county of Durham is bounded on the west side by the High Pennines which form the boundary with the county of Cumbria, to the north by the River Derwent, to the east by Gateshead and Sunderland MB's and to the south by the counties of North Yorkshire and Cleveland.

The western part of the County is mainly moorland with settlements concentrated in the three main valleys of the Derwent, Wear and Tees. Hill farming is the main economic activity but there are also important quarrying, cement and pharmaceutical industries. The eastern part of the County is lower, more fertile and more intensively cultivated. It is also more urban with many small industrial towns. Coal-mining is still important in the east of the County but in the County generally, engineering and services are the main industries.

Darlington, in the south of the county, is the largest town with a population of 87,000 but Durham City is the main administrative centre. It is an episcopal seat and university town and is noted for its Norman Cathedral and Castle. Other medieval castles in the county include Barnard Castle, Raby Castle and Lumley Castle.

Durham has much attractive scenery especially in Weardale, Teesdale and the Derwent Valley.

DISTRICT COUNCILS IN THE COUNTY

Brighton (B), Eastbourne (B), Hastings (B), Hove (B), Lewes, Rother, Wealden.

TOPOGRAPHY

The County of East Sussex forms a geographical triangle with the towns of Portslade, Hove and Brighton in the west, Crowborough in the north and the eastern 'cinque' ports of Hastings, Rye and Winchelsea. Many of the other smaller towns and villages are steeped in history, whilst the character of East Sussex stems from a combination of coast and countryside.

The beautiful coastline along its southern boundary boasts the world famous resorts of Brighton, with its many fine examples of Regency architecture and an international conference centre; Eastbourne, also another important conference centre, with its spacious 19th century avenues and theatres; and Hastings, with its history of battles and smuggling.

Large areas of the county, such as the South Downs and the Weald, are of outstanding natural beauty, whilst the countryside is one of the most wooded in England. Indeed, Ashdown Forest, in the north of the county, was once part of Andre's weald, a Saxon forest popular with English Kings for hunting.

The Norman Invasion led by William the Conqueror in 1066 brought a new cultural, economic and social structure to East Sussex and the remainder of Britain. The county continued to flourish during the Tudor period and under the Hanoverians, until today its new policies for industry, commerce and tourism, especially in the east of the county, may well prove to be another landmark in the history of East Sussex.

The county town of Lewes, for centuries the administrative centre of the county, contains the headquarters of East Sussex County Council and the Sussex Police Force.

Good road and rail services link East Sussex with London and other major towns and cities in the country, whilst ferry services from Newhaven and services from nearby Gatwick airport, provide speedy access to the continent and the rest of the world.

TOPOGRAPHY

Essex is still a rapidly expanding county, where historic towns thrive alongside modern communities, such as the two new towns and the County Council's own scheme of development for South Woodham Ferrers which is now well established. One of the main reasons for this growth, both residential and industrial, has been its ease of access to London; now the M25 has given the county better communications through the national motorway network with all parts of the country and made it more attractive to developers. In addition, Essex is an important gateway to the Continent through the ports of Tilbury and Harwich and Parkeston, and Southend and Stansted Airports. The ever-growing Tilbury docks handle trade with all parts of the world. Stansted Airport is being developed to handle 8 million passengers per annum. Much of the industrial activity in Essex is in the south of the County, but modern industries of many kinds can be found in towns throughout the county, with the more traditional industries and crafts in the rural areas. The Council provides a range of assistance to encourage economic development in the county.

In contrast to the Thames-side area the hinterland of Essex is one of the main cereal-growing areas in England and fruit-growing, market gardening and sugar beet cultivation are other important agricultural activities. The oyster farms—of historic significance—cockling and other inshore fishing still yield valuable 'crops' along the creeks and estuaries.

Essex is also a holiday county, with its north-east coast seaside resorts including Clacton, Frinton and Walton, the large town of Southend-on-Sea on the Thames estuary, and its riverside towns many of which have developed as yachting centres to meet the growing popularity of this form of recreation. Inland there are the attractions of several country parks and of the Epping and Hatfield Forests in the west. The quiet countryside, with its many unspoilt villages and historic towns, extends northwards to join the particularly beautiful Constable Country on the Suffolk border.

DISTRICT COUNCILS IN THE COUNTY

Cheltenham (B), Cotswold, Forest of Dean, Gloucester (City), Stroud, Tewkesbury (B).

TOPOGRAPHY

Gloucestershire adjoins the Counties of Avon, Hereford and Worcester, Oxfordshire, Warwickshire, Wiltshire and Gwent. Administratively, the County is composed of the six District Local Authorities listed above and 257 Civil Parishes.

Physically, Gloucestershire divides into three distinct areas. The generally low-lying Severn Vale is bounded by the Forest of Dean to the west and the Cotswold Hills to the east. The topographical variation has exerted a profound influence over the County's economic and social development.

The principal urban settlements are within the Severn Vale. The historic port and Cathedral City of Gloucester and the regency town of Cheltenham have populations approaching 100,000 each, Stroud, a former centre of the woollen industry, has a population of over 20,000 and the historic town of Tewkesbury, together with nearby Ashchurch, about 15,000. Other important centres are Cirencester in the Cotswolds, and Cinderford and Lydney in the Forest of Dean.

Gloucestershire has a rich heritage, actively conserved in both urban and rural environments with an abundance of attractive natural scenery and recreational opportunity.

The County's economy has performed relatively well in recent years, providing a wide range of job opportunities. The old traditional industries, mining in the Forest of Dean and wool in the Stroud Valleys have, in the main, disappeared but with the stimulus of good motorway and rail communications to all parts, a wide range of productive industries, particularly in light engineering have taken their place. The economy is diversified by an expanding service sector employment, particularly in Cheltenham and Gloucester. Many major employers have chosen to locate within the County, including Smiths Industries, Birds Eye Walls, ICI, Eagle Star Insurance and Nuclear Electric, joining indigenous giants such as the Dowty Group. These are soon to be joined by the Registrar's Department of the Bank of England. The County Council is seeking to consolidate on recent economic improvements in Gloucestershire is implementing a broad programme of action aimed at assisting local employers, and selectively encouraging new firms to locate in the County.

The first Structure Plan for Gloucestershire was approved by the Secretary of State for the Environment in 1981. It envisaged further employment and population growth in the County, in particular, within the Severn Vale, whilst protecting Gloucestershire's urban and rural environments. The recent revision of the Plan provides for additional housing and employment, with the continued objective of conserving the County's rich heritage.

DISTRICT COUNCILS IN THE COUNTY

Basingstoke and Deane (B), East Hampshire, Eastleigh (B), Fareham (B), Gosport (B), Hart, Havant (B), New Forest, Portsmouth (City), Rushmoor (B), Southampton (City), Test Valley (B), Winchester (City).

TOPOGRAPHY

Hampshire is a County of great variety, the largest non-Metropolitan County in England, with a population of approximately 1½ million. It ranges from the heathlands in the north-east, and the home of the British Army at Aldershot, across the chalk downlands with their sweeping vistas, and on to the attractive southern coastline, with the Solent a mecca for yachting.

Most of the population live in the southern part of the County, which relies for its economic strength on the cities of Portsmouth and Southampton. Portsmouth, once the principal Naval base for Britain's imperial role, with its dockyard and Army Garrison, has successfully diversified its economy with electrical and electronic engineering especially prominent, although the presence of the Royal Navy remains dominant. Southampton too has seen major changes. Its importance as a passenger port with worldwide links has given way to an emphasis on freight container traffic, whilst highly important petrochemical industries are located on Southampton Water.

In the 1980's much of the planned growth in the County has been located in the south Hampshire area, at Totton, Fareham (Western Wards), Chandlers Ford and Hedge End.

Farther north, the old-established market towns of Andover and Basingstoke were greatly expanded in the 1960's and early 1970's under Town Development Agreements with the Greater London Council, but these have now been terminated.

Much of Hampshire is devoted to a flourishing agricultural industry; 13,000 people are directly employed in this, but many more gain their livelihood as a result of it. The bulk of employment lies in the service sector, both private and public.

The County Council places great emphasis on conservation, both of buildings and landscape. Hampshire's greatest treasure is, perhaps, the New Forest, containing nearly 100,000 acres of varied and beautiful landscape and providing a rich habitat for flora and fauna and enjoyed annually by hundreds of thousands of visitors.

Winchester, the County town and once the capital of England, also has much to offer the visitor with all its historic associations. The Cathedral, dating from 1079 and one of the longest cathedrals in the world, is especially noteworthy.

Bromsgrove, Hereford (City), Leominster, Malvern Hills, Redditch, South Herefordshire, Worcester (City), Wychavon, Wyre Forest.

TOPOGRAPHY

The county of Hereford and Worcester stretches from the outskirts of Birmingham to the Welsh Border. Scenically it ranks among the foremost, including among its attractions the beauties of the Wye Valley, the Malvern Hills, the Black Mountains, the Vale of Evesham, and the Broadway area of the Cotswolds. This is a county of cathedrals, abbeys and priories, whose festival music attracts many. The Wye is one of the finest fishing rivers in the country, and the Severn provides expanding leisure facilities for boating. At blossom time the Vale of Evesham and the Teme Valley rival the Dutch bulb fields as a vision of delight.

Although the county has strong tourist attractions, it also enjoys vigorous industrial growth. Well served by motorways, new industries are thriving at Redditch and at Droitwich. At Hereford industrial opportunities are available at the former Ministry of Defence Depot at Rotherwas, and sites have expanded at Leominster, Ross-on-Wye, Bromyard, Kington and Ledbury. The administrative county is comprised of nine districts and includes 434 civil parishes.

DISTRICT COUNCILS IN THE COUNTY

Broxbourne (B), Dacorum (B), East Hertfordshire, Hertsmer (B), North Hertfordshire, St. Albans (City), Stevenage (B), Three Rivers, Watford (B), Welwyn Hatfield.

TOPOGRAPHY

Hertfordshire lies directly north of London. The principal towns include Watford, Hitchin, the county town of Hertford, the cathedral city of St Albans, Letchworth the first Garden City and the New Towns of Stevenage, Hemel Hempstead, Welwyn Garden City and Hatfield. Many important examples of modern architecture are found in these towns.

The main traffic routes between the south-east and the great conurbations of the Midlands and the North fan out across the county, which, together with the M1 and M25, give it one of the heaviest motorway concentrations in the country. There are, proportionately, more vehicles on the move in Hertfordshire at any one time than almost anywhere in Europe, outside the principal cities. Nevertheless much of the county remains an attractive pastoral and agricultural landscape.

Hertfordshire has played its part in the development of modern technology and research in a number of important fields, notably in equipment for space exploration, in the design and manufacture of jet-age aircraft, computers and electronics, and in specialised areas of plastics and pharmaceuticals. Some of the biggest firms in the Midlands and the North rely on the products of Hertfordshire's skilled tool and pattern makers to keep their mass production lines at full speed.

The county has been a centre for the printing industry for generations and some of the finest reprographic work in the world is created here, ranging from newspapers, books and magazines to the highest quality artwork obtainable.

Hertfordshire does not lack history—St Alban the first British Martyr died in the city which bears his name; William the Conqueror was offered the crown at Berkhamsted; the Black Prince brought the captive King John of France to Hertford Castle in 1359; Edmund Tudor, father of the first Tudor King, Henry VII, was born at Much Hadham and Elizabeth the First was staying at Hatfield Palace when she heard of her accession to the throne.

DISTRICT COUNCILS IN THE COUNTY

East Yorkshire Borough of Beverley (B), Boothferry (B), Cleethorpes (B), East Yorkshire (B), Ganton (B), Great Grimsby (B), Holderness (B), Hull City, Scunthorpe (B).

TOPOGRAPHY

Each of Humberside's 868,000 acres has one person living in it—or would do if the population of the county were spread uniformly over the hills, plains, coastline, towns and villages of this fascinating area.

In fact, the sound of the skylark is more often to be heard than any human noise in the great fields of the Wolds—some of the country's finest agricultural land. As for most of the sandy coastline, it must be the most undiscovered—and yet one of the most appealing—in Britain.

Highlighted at the extreme ends of the county by the thriving resorts of Bridlington and Cleethorpes, the coast runs north and south from the mouth of the Humber Estuary. Where that river joins the sea, there is the strange and silent spit of land known to generations of homecoming sailors as Spurn Point—over a mile long and yet only a few yards wide.

Humberside, however, is not all silent. Apart from the bustle of Beverley on market days—and the town is a major tourist attraction in its own right—Hull, Grimsby and Scunthorpe are busy industrial and commercial centres with plenty of land available to interest the far-sighted industrialist. In the case of the first two, there is that rarity in Northern Europe—flat land immediately adjoining deep water. Add an improved and still improving communications network—the four ports of Goole, Grimsby, Immingham and Hull—and a centrally-sited airport—and it can be seen why Humberside has received the Royal accolade of "a land of opportunity".

The occasion of that optimistic but well-founded forecast was the opening of the world's longest single-span suspension bridge over the Humber. Now—at last—the two sides of the estuary are being drawn together into a common purpose—the creation of a viable economic unit. Humberside is poised to take full advantage of the many challenges and opportunities which the rest of the century has to offer.

TOPOGRAPHY

A naturally beautiful diamond shaped island centrally situated a few miles off the south coast enjoying a mild sunny climate. Its northern coast is bounded by the waters of the Solent and Spithead which are world renowned for yachting and leisure pursuits and also serve the great naval and commercial ports of Portsmouth and Southampton. Its southern shores are bounded by the English Channel with Cherbourg just over 60 miles to the south east. A narrow ridge of high downland stretches across the centre from the Needles in the west to Culver Cliffs in the east. The north of the island has little relief and a heavy soil comprising woodland and pasture while the southern part is more varied with gently rolling hills and high downs and fertile valleys lying in between. Over the centuries the island's strategic, defensive and trading position has meant a succession of invasions and settlements since 1900 BC. The Victorians greatly popularised the island for holidays. The island's traditional industries of agriculture, tourism and boatbuilding have developed to embrace modern high technology aerospace, electronics, plastics and marine engineering. Communication with the mainland is by frequent vehicle and traditional ferry, catamaran, hovercraft and hydrofoil services and by light aircraft to Bembridge and Sandown.

TOPOGRAPHY

Kent has existed since history has been written. It is the oldest recorded place name in the British Isles.

When Julius Caesar and his Roman Legions tried to splash ashore more than 2,000 years ago it was the men of Kent, or Cantii, who beat them back.

A thousand years later the Domesday Book started with Chent, or as William the Norman would have pronounced it, "Kent".

Today the County thrives on its reputation as the Gateway to Europe and its use as the United Kingdom's principal access to the continent through ports like Dover, Folkestone, Ramsgate, Dartford and Sheerness is increasing rapidly. Major development is taking place on the coast and inland associated with the construction and future potential of the Channel Tunnel. Kent has also traditionally been regarded as the Garden of England, deriving from the quality of its agriculture and in particular the intensive fruit, vegetable and hop production for which it is well known.

It is a County of variety and contrast: industrial towns and coastal resorts; marshlands, downs and weald; attractive villages in verdant rural settings but also major mineral works.

Traditional Kentish industries like papermaking and cement manufacture are located in North and Mid-Kent, particularly along the banks of the Rivers Thames and Medway. West Malling airfield is being re-developed as the largest Business Park in Europe, to be known as "Kings Hill".

In East Kent, tourism is a major industry and the attractions include world famous Canterbury and seaside resorts like Broadstairs and Margate.

The ease of access to neighbouring London and the lure of a decent house in pleasant surroundings has attracted many new residents from the capital. The proximity of London is also responsible for large scale commuting from many towns in Kent. Conversely many Londoners visit the Kent countryside and coast for recreation.

DISTRICT COUNCILS IN THE COUNTY

Blaby, Charnwood (B), Harborough, Hinckley and Bosworth (B), Leicester (City), Melton (B), North West Leicestershire, Oadby and Wigston (B), Rutland.

TOPOGRAPHY

Leicestershire is full of interest both historically and physically. Leicester Castle was the meeting place of one of the earliest English Parliaments, whilst Leicester Abbey gave haven to Cardinal Wolsey during his last days, but the Leicester of today is a thriving City embracing many industries, notably hosiery, footwear, engineering, electronics and plastics.

The Roman occupation of the County left its mark in the highways they constructed, notably, the Great North Road (A1), the Watling Street (A5), and the Fosse Way (A46). Although Leicestershire is also now well served by motorway links with the M1, M6 and M69 all passing through the county.

The county towns have their own particular characters. Coalville has been a centre of coal mining, although this is being phased out of the area. Coal production in the county will continue with the opening of the new mine at Asfordby near Melton Mowbray, an area until now more likely to be associated with its pork pies, fox hunting and its links with Stilton cheese.

Loughborough attracts prominence through its University, whilst Hinckley famous as the birth place of the inventor of the Hansom cab supports important hosiery and related engineering careers. Oakham Castle is well known for its collection of horseshoes left by visiting nobility.

The rural parts of the County are given over to a very efficient and progressive agricultural industry and whilst the pattern has changed over the last half-century from dairy farming to cereal production, the pioneering stock-breeding works of Robert Bakewell of Dishley, near Loughborough, are still in evidence.

Leisure in the County is found at Rutland Water and the Battlefield Centre, near Market Bosworth which commemorates the death in August 1485 of Richard III at Bosworth Field and the end of the Plantagenet reign. The Beacon and Bradgate Parks both lie in the Charnwood Forest, an area in which farm and parklands give way to upland stretches of heather, bracken and gorse and rugged out-crops of rock.

The eastern part of the County possesses many charming but less rugged areas. The wolds in the north are dotted with stone built villages and woodlands and journeying south through "High Leicestershire" one arrives in the lush cattle grazing area of the Welland Valley near Market Harborough.

TOPOGRAPHY

Lincolnshire, the fourth largest county in England, has surprising contrasts of scenery. The Fens and Lowlands in the south have attractions for ornithologists and wild-fowlers and also rich agricultural land and acres of bulb fields around Spalding. The south-west is well wooded and served by several rivers, the Welland, Glen, Eden and Slea.

Along the east coast there is a vast expanse of sandy shores and dunes with nature reserves at Gibraltar Point and Saltfleetby. These make a wonderful background for the holiday resorts, such as Skegness, Mablethorpe and Sutton. In the north-east the Lincolnshire Wolds rise to over 500 feet, providing spectacular views.

Lincoln, the County town, is a centre of archaeological interest with remains dating from Roman times and has a 900-year-old Cathedral, castle, museums and art gallery.

Throughout the County, there are other towns rich in history and interest, such as Boston—an ancient port, Sleaford, Stamford, an architectural gem with greystone houses and churches, Louth with its famous fifteenth-century church, and Woodhall Spa, an inland resort. In addition, there are many charming villages such as Tealby, Bolingbroke and Fulbeck.

TOPOGRAPHY

The provincial capital of Norfolk is the Cathedral City of Norwich. Other important towns are King's Lynn and Great Yarmouth, with their busy ports, and the town of Thetford. There are other lively market towns, with those on the coast also being seaside resorts, and a rich variety of villages.

Norfolk is a varied county, agricultural production being one of its main features. However, employment in the manufacturing and service sectors especially financial is becoming increasingly important as the number of jobs in agriculture continues to decline. Norwich itself is an important regional centre for a wide range of commercial and service activities. Norwich Airport provides scheduled services along the Eastern coast of the United Kingdom, and to Europe and the international network via Amsterdam.

Norfolk offers 90 miles of fine coastline dotted with seaside resorts including Great Yarmouth, Hunstanton, Cromer and Sheringham. They depend greatly on the summer tourist trade for their livelihood. Tourism is also growing in importance and makes a major contribution to the County's economic base. The Norfolk Broads, Norfolk's greatest attraction, attracts large numbers of people each year to cruise and sail on the rivers and Broads and to enjoy the unique scenery and wildlife of the area.

The newly established Broads Authority (April 1989) will have a major role to play in accommodating the demands of the tourist industry whilst at the same time protecting and conserving the unique habitats which make up Broadland.

DISTRICT COUNCILS IN THE COUNTY

Corby, Daventry, East Northamptonshire, Kettering (B), Northampton (B), South Northamptonshire, Wellingborough (B).

TOPOGRAPHY

Northamptonshire is an inland county set close to the heart of the Midlands. Most of the county has remained largely unaffected by the industrial revolution which, in fact, came late to this part of England. Thus, a large part of the county has retained an essentially rural and, moreover, agricultural character. However, this character is changed to some extent by virtue of the county's location midway between the Greater London and West Midlands conurbations which, coupled with significant advances in national road and rail communications, has added to the attraction of the county for growth by way of planned and private migration. Although there has been growth in Northamptonshire since the 19th century, the greatest change has taken place in the last 20 years. The average annual growth rate of the county rose from 1% in the period 1951 to 1961 to 1.8% between 1961 and 1971, and 1.3% between 1972 and 1982. The County Structure Plan forecasts continued growth, estimating the population of the county at 1991 in the region of 610,000. However, with the slowing down of population growth now expected, the population of the county is estimated at 1991 to be in the region of 570,000.

The county's landscape, which is fairly typical of the Parliamentary enclosure landscape created in the 18th and 19th centuries, still indicates a pastoral tradition. In recent years, however, the trend has been towards arable farming although hedgerows and scattered woodlands are significant features. Most of the county lies between 100 feet and 750 feet above sea level and 80% of the land is in agricultural production. Soils are mainly glacial in origin with chalky border clays predominating.

The county is particularly well endowed with villages of architectural, historic and scenic interest. The main feature of the villages being the use of traditional building materials and a traditional building style.

TOPOGRAPHY

The County of North Yorkshire is 2,054,013 acres in area and is easily the largest County in England and Wales.

Within the County are 598 square miles (total area of park 680 square miles) of the Yorkshire Dales National Park and 530 square miles (total area of park 553 square miles) of the North York Moors National Park.

The County is included in the Yorkshire and Humberside Region. The Whitby travel to work area and part of the county around Stokesley have the benefit of development area status. Whilst the economy of the County has traditionally been dependent on agriculture and tourism, there is a fast growing high technology base and this, together with other forms of light manufacturing industry, is of increasing importance. The County Council has an active policy of industrial development.

The predominantly rural character of the County is highly attractive to high technology businesses: the County contains several centres of great historic interest; market towns invite light industrial development; the modern coalfield area in the South; scenic lightly populated upland areas; and the extensive lowland area in the Vale of York.

DISTRICT COUNCILS IN THE COUNTY

Ashfield, Bassetlaw, Broxtowe (B), Gedling (B), Mansfield, Newark and Sherwood, Nottingham (City), Rushcliffe (B).

TOPOGRAPHY

The calm and placid River Trent flows through the county and is very much the county's own river. In the north it winds through wooded vales to form the county boundary with Lincolnshire, and then eventually on to the Humber estuary.

In north Nottinghamshire there is a fast developing area around the Bassetlaw district for industry, commerce and office blocks. In Worksop there is the Dukeries Industrial Area of about one hundred acres, but further south the original Dukeries area remains with its large preserved parklands. These great estates in the north of Sherwood Forest are so called because they were originally owned by the Dukes of Norfolk, Portland, Newcastle and Kingston, and the Earls Manvers, Savile and Byron. To the north west, stretching towards Derbyshire, is the coalfield belt which features in the novels of D. H. Lawrence, who was born at Eastwood in 1885, the fourth son of a miner.

South Nottinghamshire is dominated by the historical and industrial city of Nottingham with its busy modern shopping centre, its university, theatres and sports grounds. In industrial terms the city means lace, tobacco, bicycles, leather, textiles and engineering. On the southern boundary of the city and over the Trent to the Rushcliffe district are the well-known soccer grounds of Notts County and Nottingham Forest, with the famous Test and County cricket ground of Trent Bridge alongside them.

Yet there is more to Nottinghamshire than industry, collieries and slag heaps. The River Trent, meandering through its middle course, passes south of Nottingham and creates a broad, low-lying valley of mixed farming land which links Nottingham and Newark.

DISTRICT COUNCILS IN THE COUNTY

Cherwell, Oxford (City), South Oxfordshire, Vale of White Horse, West Oxfordshire.

TOPOGRAPHY

Few counties enjoy such a rich variety of countryside within so small an area as Oxfordshire, with the Cotswolds Hills in the west, the steep slopes of the Chilterns in the east and the rolling Wessex Downs in the south, forming natural boundaries for the neat cultivated landscape of the valleys formed by the River Thames and its tributaries.

The County is predominantly rural. Farming—sheep, dairy and arable—is an important industry and Banbury, in the north of the County, boasts the largest cattle market in Europe. Other rural industries include blanket-making at Witney and glove-making at Woodstock and Charlbury. Heavy industry also has its place—with a major car factory at Cowley in Oxford and an aluminium works at Banbury—whilst the southern part of the County houses research establishments of national and international importance, notably the Atomic Energy Research Establishment at Harwell and, at Culham, the Joint European Nations nuclear fission research project (JET). Tourism is also an industry of growing importance. The University City of Oxford has a place of its own as one of the great architectural centres of the world, but there is much to be seen elsewhere. Woodstock, with Blenheim Palace, Sir Winston Churchill's birthplace, and the nearby village of Bladon, where he is buried, are particular attractions but others include the market towns of Banbury, Burford, Chipping Norton, Thame and Wantage and the Thames-side towns of Abingdon, Wallingford and Henley, home of the famous summer regatta.

The County stands firmly between southern England and the midlands and is crossed by several main traffic routes including the A34 from Southampton to the north and the M40/A40 from London through Oxford to Cheltenham. Construction of the M40 extension through Oxfordshire to Birmingham is likely to be completed in 1991/92.

DISTRICT COUNCILS IN THE COUNTY

Bridgnorth, North Shropshire, Oswestry (B), Shrewsbury and Atcham (B), South Shropshire, (The) Wrekin.

TOPOGRAPHY

Shropshire is divided diagonally by the River Severn into a hilly area in the south and west, and an undulating plain in the north and east. As a result, the county is famous for its varied geology, and for the variety and beauty of its scenery.

Archaeologically, it is rich in prehistoric settlement sites and Iron-Age hill-forts; and it includes Viroconium which was probably the fourth largest town of Roman Britain.

In the Middle Ages Shropshire formed the central part of the Marches of Wales, and a chain of castles was built to defend the border. Monasteries were founded which have left notable remains, particularly at Wenlock, Buildwas and Haughmond. Shrewsbury, the county town, Bridgnorth, Wenlock, Ludlow, Oswestry and Bishop's Castle established themselves as boroughs, while other places became busy market towns with a prosperity based on agriculture, especially Shropshire sheep and cattle. All the towns have interesting architectural features: Ludlow is outstanding as a place in which castle, church, houses, bridges, and setting are all things of beauty and there is hardly a building in the centre which does not merit preservation.

Shropshire in the 18th century became "the cradle of the Industrial Revolution". At Coalbrookdale in 1709, Abraham Darby discovered how to smelt iron with coke and for a hundred years the iron industry of Shropshire was the most prosperous in Britain. Here the world's first iron bridge and iron ship were built. Caughley and Coalport became famous names among collectors of fine china. Now the Ironbridge Gorge Museum Trust has established a museum of industrial archaeology at Coalbrookdale and Blists Hill to preserve relics of Shropshire's great industrial past. Ironbridge museum is now designated as an International World Heritage Site.

A new town has been created in the same area of the county, and named Telford, after the engineer and road builder, who was Shropshire's first county surveyor from 1788 to 1834.

Charles Darwin, the great naturalist, was born in Shrewsbury in 1809.

The County Council runs museums at Ludlow and Much Wenlock and a working farm museum at Acton Scott, as well as 12 country parks and nature reserves across Shropshire.

DISTRICT COUNCILS IN THE COUNTY

Mendip, Sedgemoor, Taunton Deane (B), West Somerset, South Somerset.

TOPOGRAPHY

Somerset is a county of remarkable charm and scenic contrasts ranging from the heather-covered heights of Exmoor to the sea-level marshes of Sedgemoor.

The Quantock Hills and Mendip Hills are Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty, and the Blackdown Hills are also to be given this designation.

The coastline along the Bristol Channel ranges from long sandy beaches through mudflats which are important nature reserves and on to the towering cliffs which flank the Exmoor National Park.

The hills and the rolling agricultural vales are set with villages and towns which are rich in architecture and in history.

Behind this rural facade the county successfully integrates a wide range of commercial and industrial undertakings ranging in size and scope from cottage-industry craft production to international manufacturing names.

The M5 motorway forms a superlative trading and communications link with the rest of the country and provides ease of access for tourists. The A303 trunk route provides a further motorway standard link with London and S.E. England.

The variety of landscape and a wide range of facilities make Somerset an attractive destination for many tourist tastes. The county council recognises the importance of tourism to the local economy and is co-operating with all interests to ensure that the county is settled even more firmly on the tourism map.

Agriculture is the basis of Somerset's economy with over 80 per cent of the county devoted to agricultural production.

Manufacturing industries involve some 30 per cent of the workforce. The county council is committed to ensuring the continuing and increasing prosperity of existing industries and is taking active steps to ensure the availability of land for light industrial development to assist growth and attract new companies.

The County recognises the challenges and opportunities offered to local businesses by the single European Market, and has set up a European Business Service to help local businesses prepare for this.

Small businesses are being encouraged to establish themselves in the county where, in addition to the attractive environment, labour is available and the cost of premises is competitive. The Education Authority is contributing by involving itself closely with the educational needs posed by new technology.

DISTRICT COUNCILS IN THE COUNTY

Cannock Chase, East Staffordshire, Lichfield, Newcastle-under-Lyme (B), South Staffordshire, Stafford (B), Staffordshire Moorlands, Stoke-on-Trent (City), Tamworth (B).

TOPOGRAPHY

Staffordshire has everything. Beautiful countryside, ancient houses and castles, quiet country villages, bustling towns and cities, manufacturing and commerce, theme parks and nature centres.

The county is the fifth biggest in England and Wales and its one million plus inhabitants share 1,048 square miles of urban and rural land.

Situated in the centre of England Staffordshire typifies the best that Britain has to offer. The north eastern part features the Peak District National Park, with its towering heights and secluded valleys. The ancient woodland of Cannock Chase dominates the centre of Staffordshire, giving it a green wild heart.

The south and east of the county is mainly gentle rolling slopes, fertile farmland interspersed with small towns and villages.

Almost a quarter of Staffordshire's people live in the bustling City of Stoke-on-Trent. This is the county's industrial heartland where the new high-technology industries and the more traditional potteries and small businesses bring prosperity to the region. Other major towns include Stafford, Newcastle, Leek, Uttoxeter, Cannock, Lichfield, Burton and Tamworth.

Industrial heritage is kept alive today by working museums and attractions such as the Wedgwood Visitor Centre, the Bass Brewery Museum, the unique Chatterley Whitfield mining museum, the Gladstone Victorian Pottery Centre, and Stoke-on-Trent City Museum, which is one of the finest in the country.

Staffordshire County Council plays an active part in every aspect of the area's life. It is the County's largest employer, and actively encourages the creation of new jobs through its Business Advice Services, Enterprise Centres, Business Park etc.

It also vigorously assists in the promotion of the area as a tourist attraction through publicity initiatives and a direct management of various Country Parks and other leisure facilities.

Education, Social Services, Highways, Libraries, Planning, Trading Standards and Waste Disposal are all the responsibility of the County Council. Its members and officers ensure a co-ordinated approach to ensure the future prosperity of the county.

DISTRICT COUNCILS IN THE COUNTY

Babergh, Forest Heath, Ipswich (B), Mid Suffolk, St. Edmundsbury (B), Suffolk Coastal, Waveney.

TOPOGRAPHY

Suffolk has a long history as an agricultural county, and farming still dominates the landscape. The countryside is predominantly arable farmland diversified with forest, woods, heath, water meadows, marsh, estuary and coastline. Together with a wealth of historic settlements; these features make up a rural landscape which is still one of the most attractive and least-spoilt in England.

The County has a broad economic base and a wide variety of employers. Among the more important are agricultural machinery, electronics, telecommunications research and development, insurance, port activities, printing, motor vehicle components, food processing and North Sea oil and gas exploration.

There are two important seaside resorts, Lowestoft and Felixstowe, and several attractive smaller centres along the largely unspoiled Heritage Coast. The world-famous Aldeburgh Festival takes place every year in June. Inland there are many settlements of architectural and historic interest, of which Bury St. Edmunds, Beccles, Woodbridge and the 'wool towns' of Lavenham, Long Melford and Clare are outstanding. Ipswich, the County town, has Saxon origins and is renowned for its sporting and recreation facilities. Overall the County provides an attractive environment for living and working.

The main road network is established by the A45, A12 and A11 trunk routes which link the County, and in particular the expanding ports of Felixstowe, Ipswich and Lowestoft with the Midlands and the North and with London and the South-East. Other important routes are the A140 Ipswich—Norwich trunk road and the A143, A146 Bury St. Edmunds—Lowestoft road. Electrification of the main railway line from Norwich via Ipswich to London has increased the speed and frequency of services.

Planning policies aim to maintain the County's character and beauty and at the same time to accommodate as far as possible the pressures for change which have put Suffolk among the fastest growing counties. Much of the development pressure is felt along the A45 corridor, and is particularly directed towards Bury St. Edmunds and Ipswich. Most forms of development are encouraged in all the towns and restrained elsewhere. An economic development unit promotes the County and ensures that the local economy continues to grow. In central and north-east Suffolk a Rural Development Programme is being carried out to improve the quality of life for people in this relatively remote area.

TOPOGRAPHY

Surrey is one of the smallest counties in England, situated on the edge of London and hence very much influenced by it. There is considerable commuting into London or to either of the major London airports of Heathrow and Gatwick.

Despite its proximity to London, Surrey has kept much of its natural charm with beautiful countryside, mainly downland and heathland, and picturesque villages like Abinger Hammer, Shere, Otford and those in the woods around Friday Street. Market and country towns, such as Godalming, Farnham, Reigate and Dorking still boast timbered houses and old town halls, yet also provide good shopping facilities. Guildford, generally regarded as the County town, is a fascinating blend of old and new, with its cobblestones and Guildhall, new theatre and sports centre, ancient castle and modern university and cathedral.

Dairy farming and horticulture, the latter particularly around Bagshot, are important and, in the North West of Surrey, gravel winning.

The Rivers Thames and Wey, and Thorpe Park, offer a wide range of water-based activities, and there are numerous golf courses available, not least the nationally famous Wentworth. Surrey also offers a number of stately homes open to the public, for example, Polesden Lacey, with its open air theatre, and four popular race courses, one at Epsom, Kempton Park near Sunbury, Sandown at Esher and Lingfield.

DISTRICT COUNCILS IN THE COUNTY

North Warwickshire (B), Nuneaton and Bedworth (B), Rugby (B), Stratford-on-Avon, Warwick.

TOPOGRAPHY

The County of Warwickshire, justifiably known as "The Heart of England" lies within the south-eastern corner of the West Midlands Region at the hub of the national communications system. Coventry and the Birmingham Conurbation border the County.

Warwickshire is a compact County, being some 50 miles from north to south, and 30 miles east to west. The landscape is undulating with very few high hills, apart from the Cotswold escarpment on the south-west boundary. Largely rural, Warwickshire's half a dozen free-standing towns, together with a number of charming villages each with their own distinctive character, offer the advantages of a pleasant environment together with all the services and facilities of a conurbation near at hand.

Over the last 20 years the population of the county has grown by more than 90,000 to 484,000. However future growth is likely to be more modest with the population approaching half a million by the turn of the century. The largest centres are Nuneaton/Bedworth (114,000), Warwick/Leamington/Kenilworth (117,000) and Rugby (60,000). Other important centres include the historic town of Stratford-on-Avon (21,000) and the smaller settlements to the north of the county: Atherstone (7,500) and Coleshill (7,000).

Quite apart from its active tourist industry, the County's economy has not declined as rapidly in recent years as the neighbouring towns of Birmingham and Coventry, and covers a diverse range of activities principally associated with the motor industry and electrical and general engineering. Established firms include GEC, Lodge Ceramics, JK Lasers and Rugby Portland Cement Co. Ltd. in Rugby; AP Ltd., Potterton International Ltd. in Warwick; and the Ford Motor Co. Ltd. and Dennis Eagle in Leamington; Sterling Metal Ltd., Nuneaton; N. C. Joseph Ltd., IDC Ltd. and NFU Mutual Assurance in Stratford. This dependence on the motor industry, however, has led to the recognition of a need to diversify the Coventry/Warwickshire economy and parts of the County now benefit from Assisted Area Status. There has been a significant growth in the service sector in recent years, Warwickshire intends to capitalise on its excellent communications network and high quality residential environment in attracting new firms to the area. Recent examples of its success include IBM in Warwick and BHS in Atherstone. There is also an active tourist industry centred on the historic towns of Warwick and Stratford.

Through the County Structure Plan, the County Council has had to strike a balance between preserving the physical environment yet at the same time providing new homes and encouraging local employment opportunities. New housing and industrial development is principally located in the main towns of the County, leaving the rural areas relatively unchanged.

DISTRICT COUNCILS IN THE COUNTY

Adur, Arun, Chichester, Crawley (B), Horsham, Mid Sussex, Worthing (B).

TOPOGRAPHY

One of the most wooded counties in the country, West Sussex stretches along the Channel coast from the Selsey peninsular to just west of Brighton with the towns of Horsham and Crawley in the north.

It is a county of contrasts with the popular seaside towns of Worthing and Bognor Regis sheltered by the rolling chalk hills of the Sussex Downs, which can be explored from the South Downs Way, a long distance footpath and bridleway running across the whole county.

Behind the Downs are the fields and lanes of the Sussex Weald and the picturesque villages so typical of the county with their parish churches, inns and flint-stoned cottages grouped round village ponds and greens, while in the south west are the sheltered waters and quiet creeks of Chichester Harbour, haven for wildfowl and yachtsmen.

Chichester is the main centre, a Roman city with the Palace at Fishbourne, one of the most important Roman sites in the country, on the western outskirts. The four main streets, with Georgian architecture, form a cross dominated by the Norman cathedral. Nearby Goodwood House, Petworth House, and Arundel Castle are a few of the many fine houses which are open to the public.

Once almost entirely a farming community, West Sussex has a thriving holiday trade and most of its towns have some type of light industry, although about five per cent of the working population is still employed in agriculture, forestry and horticulture. Crawley, with Gatwick airport, is the main manufacturing and employment centre, and consequently has a much younger population than the coastal towns where there is a high proportion of retired people. The appeal of living in country surroundings is also bringing growing numbers of commuters to settle in West Sussex taking advantage of a fast train service to London.

DISTRICT COUNCILS IN THE COUNTY

Kennet, North Wiltshire, Salisbury, Thamesdown (B), West Wiltshire.

TOPOGRAPHY

With an area of over 348,000 hectares, Wiltshire is one of England's largest inland counties. It is a county of contrasts—a countryside of vast chalk downs, rising to almost 1,000 ft. in places, of clear flowing streams, often in deep valleys and fertile vales, and numerous well-wooded districts. From Salisbury Plain and the Marlborough Downs radiate all the chalk ridges of southern and eastern England.

Here were the early centres of civilization, for Wiltshire has more prehistoric relics than any other county, notably the gigantic circles of Stonehenge, its prototype of Woodhenge, the even older, Avebury, and Silbury Hill, the greatest artificial mound in Europe.

The villages and market towns of Wiltshire are characterized by picturesque groupings of stone-built or half-timbered and thatched houses and many dignified later period residences and public buildings. The churches are ancient and display many features of great architectural interest. Wiltshire is celebrated too, for its magnificent and historic country mansions.

POPULATION AND ECONOMY

Wiltshire has a rapidly developing local economy characterised by an increasing diversification in economic activity. New industries have grown in response to factors such as excellent communications—with activities such as electronics, computing, insurance and business services, pharmaceuticals, plastics, research and information and telecommunications taking over in importance from the more traditional industries such as food processing and engineering. Farming continues to be an important activity although local industries based on it have declined in significance. Wiltshire is also of increasing significance as a tourist destination, especially for short break holidays.

Although predominantly rural, Wiltshire is, nevertheless, in terms of population and new building a rapidly expanding area. With a population of just over half a million and a birth-rate higher than the average, the county is expected to continue to grow. Expansion is taking place in three areas, particularly Swindon, already by far the largest centre of population and industry; in the western Wiltshire towns; and around Salisbury.

GREATER LONDON GOVERNMENT

Under the London Government Act 1963, the Greater London Council and the 32 chartered boroughs came into existence on 1st April 1965. These bodies replaced the London and Middlesex County Councils, the County Boroughs of Croydon, East Ham and West Ham, 28 Metropolitan Boroughs (in the former London County Council area), 39 non-county boroughs and 15 urban district councils. The City of London Corporation remained undisturbed with greater powers.

The Greater London Council ceased to exist from 1 April 1986 under the Local Government Act 1985.

Functions of the City Corporation and the London Boroughs are summarised under the respective headings in the following pages. The Lord Mayor of London has the privilege of being addressed as "The Right Honourable".

London Borough Councillors have four year terms of office retiring together; the last London Borough Elections were held in May, 1990 and the next will be held 6 May, 1994.

LONDON BOROUGH ASSOCIATION

The London Boroughs Association, whose membership and objects are set out below, was formed in 1964 to act as a forum in which the London boroughs can discuss common problems; to provide machinery through which they can co-ordinate their activities; and to enable them to express their views corporately to the government, the GLC and other bodies.

Membership

Nineteen of the London Borough Councils and the Corporation of the City of London are in membership of the Association; each of them is entitled to appoint four representatives to serve on the Association and its committees.

Objects

The objects of the Association are—

- (a) To protect and advance the powers, interests, rights and privileges of the constituent Councils and to watch over those powers, interests, rights and privileges as they may be affected by legislation, or proposed legislation, or otherwise.
- (b) To discuss questions of London government, and to advise and assist the constituent Councils in the administration of their powers and duties.
- (c) To express the views of the Association and to consult with appropriate bodies or persons whenever deemed advisable.

Constitution

The Corporation of London is unique among municipalities for its constitution, its 800 years of history and its somewhat exceptional powers and activities. The City—known as the Square Mile—is a county in itself, and the Corporation has many of the functions of a County Council.

The legal definition of the City Corporation is The Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens of the City of London. It is governed by the Court of Common Council, which consists of the Lord Mayor, 24 Aldermen and 136 Common Councillmen. The Common Council is not merely a deliberative body: it is also a legislative assembly and can remodel its own constitution. It has no party politics. The Lord Mayor is nominated by the livery voters of the City Guilds and elected by the Court of Aldermen. Aldermen are elected by those eligible to vote in the several Wards, who also annually elect Common Councillmen.

Committees

Like Borough Councils, Common Council works through Committees, some of which consist of two Aldermen and 29 Commoners, the former being nominated by the Court of Aldermen, the latter by members of the 25 Wards. Each committee member serves for four years. The 350-year-old Committee, now known as the City Lands and Bridge House Estates Committee, is regarded as the premier Committee, and its chairman is designated Chief Commoner. It manages the lands and buildings belonging to the Corporation (with certain exceptions).

Revenue from the City's Estate is known as City's Cash, and out of it certain expenses of civic government are paid with no charge to the ratepayer or community charge payers. Out of the revenue of the Bridge House Estates, four Thames bridges (London, Southwark, Blackfriars and Tower Bridge) are maintained and rebuilt when necessary. The new London Bridge was completed in 1973.

The Coal, Corn and Rates Finance Committee is the finance committee of the Corporation, comparable to the finance committee of a county council. There are separate committees for the Barbican, Schools, Epping Forest and Open Spaces, Hampstead Heath, Housing, Libraries, Planning and Communications, Markets, Museum of London, Music, Police, Health, and Social Services etc. The Policy and Resources Committee co-ordinates and is responsible for public relations.

Planning and Development

The City is one of the most historically important settlements in the country. The principal task in Town Planning is to endeavour to improve living, working and travelling conditions (including social and leisure facilities) and to enhance the City's environmental quality, whilst still promoting its development as the leading financial and business centre of the world.

The City of London Local Plan was adopted on the 12th January 1989. In July 1989, the Secretary of State for the Environment issued the Strategic Guidance for London to assist the City and the London Boroughs to prepare their Unitary Development Plans. When adopted, the City of London Unitary Development Plan will replace the provisions of the 1976 Greater London Development Plan and the adopted local plans for the City—the 1989 City of London Local Plan and the 1981 Smithfield District Plan, currently being reviewed. It is anticipated that the Draft UDP will be replaced formally on deposit in 1991.

A Development Plan is essential to ensure that the environmental character and economic wellbeing of the City will be maintained and advanced, since the economic buoyancy of the City creates a steady flow of applications for redevelopment or refurbishment. There was a significant boost to the development activity in the City and the growth in the demand for expansive trading floors as a result of the "Big Bang". The emergence of the single European Market in 1992 is expected to stimulate a spurt of further development activity in the City. In considering such proposals, it is necessary to bear in mind the pressures and demands placed on the City's services and facilities and these aspects will be regularly reassessed as part of the on-going Development Plan studies.

In appropriate locations planning decisions must also take into consideration the character of the 22 designated conservation areas, and buildings of historic and architectural interest, of which there are over 400. Besides this, the townscape character of the rest of the City is also of value, and an assessment has been made of all the pre-1939 buildings in the City.

The City receives over 900 planning applications a year and these have in recent years been steadily increasing. Since the advent of planning fees in April 1981, applications have produced an income of some £90,000 per annum which rose to £206,871 in 1988-89. Many of the applications are for major redevelopments, typical examples being the redevelopment of Liverpool Street/Broad Street stations which is under construction, the new headquarters for Lloyds, the refurbishment of the former Deanery of St. Paul's Cathedral (a Grade I listed building attributed to Wren), and the old Billingsgate Market, which won the 1989 Civic Trust Award. In order to meet the exacting demand for modern office accommodation of the highest standard to house tenants from the financial and professional sectors in a location close to the city centre, planning permission has also been granted for large redevelopment schemes including Moor House, Lee House and Little Britain in the London Wall area. As a result of the exodus of the newspaper industry from the Fleet Street area, a number of developments are under way in the area including the Daily Telegraph and Daily Express buildings. The implementation of the massive Holburn Viaduct development scheme has resulted in the dismantling of the Ludgate Hill railway bridge, which has spanned the road since 1865. This has had the effect of liberating the view of St. Paul's from Fleet Street after 125 years.

Open Spaces

Epping Forest, Hampstead Heath, Burnham Beeches, Coudson Commons, West Wickham Common, Spring Park, Highgate Wood, Queens Park (Kilburn) and parks at Wanstead and West Ham, are open spaces (most of them in the Green Belt) acquired by the Corporation and maintained for the enjoyment of Londoners and the conservation of wild life. In June 1971 a Conservation Centre, run by the Field Studies Council, was opened at High Beach, Epping Forest. In 1989 the Corporation assumed the ownership and management of Hampstead Heath. The Corporation is also acquiring Ashted Common out of the Barrat Bequest fund. More than 160 small open spaces are cared for by the Corporation of London within the Square Mile of the City. Many of these are tiny—just a tree and a couple of seats providing an oasis among concrete office blocks and busy streets.

Barbican Centre

The Barbican Centre is owned, funded and managed by the Corporation. Its facilities include the Barbican Hall (2026 seats), the Barbican Theatre (1162 seats), the Pit (Studio Theatre 245 seats), Cinemas 1 (280 seats), 2 (255 seats) and 3 (153 seats), Barbican Art Gallery, Barbican Library, Conference Rooms A to E, and Exhibition Halls Red and Blue. The Centre provides extensive facilities for national and international conferences and trade shows. The Centre is home for the London Symphony Orchestra and the London base of the Royal Shakespeare Company as well as providing premises for the City University Business School and Department of Arts Policy of the City University. The programmes of music and drama provided by the resident companies are complemented by an extensive programme of music, cinema and art exhibitions. The Guildhall School of Music and Drama is a further important part of the Barbican Centre, and provides wide-ranging additions to its programme. The Centre was opened on 3rd March 1982 by H.M. The Queen.

Housing

The City's activities in the housing field are two-fold:

(a) Council housing—The Housing Committee manages approximately 3,000 properties sited both in the City and in several surrounding boroughs, the estates comprise a wide variety of accommodation to cater for all needs, including some purpose built accommodation for elderly people. People working in the City as well as existing City residents can apply for inclusion on the housing waiting list.

The requirements of the Housing Act 1985 and the Housing and Planning Act 1986 relating to sales of accommodation have been accepted and as a consequence, approximately 14% of the managed stock is sold on long leases.

(b) Barbican—the residential element of this complex exceeds 2,000 flats built without benefit of housing subsidy. The Corporation's current policy permits flats to be sold—either under the terms of the Housing Act 1985 and the Housing and Planning Act 1986 or on the open market, or to be let on 3-year renewable leases.

Education

Four schools (three of them actually in the Square Mile) are run by the Corporation. The City of London School, a leading public day school for boys opened in 1837, moved in September 1986 to a new riverside site at Blackfriars. The City of London School for Girls (also an independent day school), opened in 1894, is now in the heart of the Barbican. The City of London Freeman's School (opened at Brixton in 1854, and now at Ashted, Surrey) is co-educational and caters for both day-pupils and boarders. The Corporation awards a number of scholarships each year in open competition at all three schools.

The Guildhall School of Music and Drama, founded by the Corporation in 1880 as Britain's first municipal school of music, prepares music and drama students for professional careers. The School moved into its purpose-built home in the Barbican Centre for Arts and Conferences in 1977 and has 663 full-time and 420 part-time students. It has the great advantage of proximity to the Royal Shakespeare Company and the London Symphony Orchestra in the Barbican Centre.

The Gresham Trust, administered jointly by the Corporation and the Mercers' Company, is devoted to the maintenance of the Royal Exchange and Gresham College, and eight Gresham Professors are elected annually to deliver lectures in Music, Divinity, Geometry, Astronomy, Law, Physics, Rhetoric and Commerce to students and members of the public at the City University, which was inaugurated in 1966 with the Lord Mayor as Chancellor.

Libraries, Art Galleries and Records

The Libraries, Art Galleries and Record Offices are in the care of the Libraries, Art Galleries and Records Committee. Guildhall Library, which dates back to 1828, is one of the leading public reference libraries in the country, with nearly 200,000 books, 100,000 archival units, 200,000 graphic items and 63,000 microfilms as well as the libraries of the Worshipful Companies of Gardiners, Fletchers and Clockmakers, the Lloyd's Marine Collection, and the Museum of clocks and watches belonging to the Clockmakers' Company. Its particular strengths are the history and development of London, genealogy and business history.

The City Business Library in Fenchurch Street, with its special material of financial, economic and statistical interest, meets the day-to-day needs of the City's business community, as well as providing a resource centre of national significance in the field of commercial information.

The St. Bride Printing Library (off Fleet Street), with over 37,000 books and pamphlets and 5,000 periodicals, is internationally recognised as a major source of information on the development of the book. A collection of early presses is displayed in an adjacent room.

City residents, workers and students are served by the Bishopsgate, Shoe Lane and Barbican Lending Libraries. Special collections include loan material on finance, banking and London history. The Barbican Library, opened in 1982 forms part of the Barbican Centre. It incorporates a separate children's library and music library, with the latter providing a sound recordings listening and loan service.

The Corporation of London Records Office contains the finest collection of municipal archives in the country, spanning nine centuries, from William the Conqueror's Charter to the present day.

The Greater London Record Office was established in 1965 when the records and archives in both the former Record Offices of the London County Council and the Middlesex County Council were taken over by the Greater London Council. It is the largest local authority record office in the country and contains a wide range of collections of books, manuscripts, maps, photographs, plans and prints relating to the metropolitan area, occupying some 13 miles of shelving.

The Corporation assumed responsibility for the GLRO on 1st April 1986, upon the abolition of the GLC.

The Guildhall Art Gallery (established 1886 but temporarily closed) has a permanent collection of pictures by many leading artists including Lely, Reynolds, Constable, Brangwyn, Lawrence, Fantin-Latour and Millais (many are of London interest). Barbican Art Gallery, opened in 1982, is designed to mount temporary exhibitions of international standing.

Museum of London

The Museum of London (formed by amalgamating Guildhall Museum and the London Museum) was opened by H.M. The Queen in December 1976. The new Museum presents the biography of the whole London area and is a centre for London studies at all levels. It is financed and supported equally by the State (OAL) and the Corporation of London. The building, adjoining the Barbican, at the corner of Aldersgate Street and London Wall, includes 50,000 sq. ft. of gallery space, a separate education wing, study facilities, a shop and restaurant.

Health

The Health Department under the Medical Officer of Health has wide-ranging responsibilities not only in the City but also in the Port of London, London City Airport and at London Airport, including—

(a) Port Health—control measures in respect of infectious disease, control of imported food and control of pollution over 90 miles of the River Thames and its estuary and part of the River Medway.

(b) City Environmental Health—provision of services relating to food hygiene in catering establishments, control of pollution, Health and Safety at Work and infectious disease control. Also in the City at Smithfield Market the Corporation has responsibilities for food hygiene and meat inspection.

(c) Control of imported animals throughout the Greater London Area which includes Heathrow Airport where the Corporation has the most efficient and up-to-date Animal Quarantine Station in the world. Animal welfare services provided on an agency basis to the majority of London Boroughs.

(d) Consumer Protection services for the City, including weights and measures function and certain licensing/registration duties which include licensing of places of public entertainment.

Markets

The Corporation is the market authority for the City. Billingsgate Market which handles 200 tons of fish a day moved from its former site in the City to West India Dock in January, 1982. Leadenhall Market has between 30 and 40 shops, mostly retailing food. Spitalfields (just beyond the City boundary), with an area of 12 acres, accommodates 150 wholesalers of fruit, vegetables and flowers is moving to a new site at Temple Mills in the London Borough of Waltham Forest where the new facilities incorporate accommodation for traders from Stratford Market also. The London Central Markets (Smithfield) is the world's largest market for dead meat, poultry and provisions, covering 10 acres and handling approximately 150,000 tons of produce annually.

Police

The City has its own police force, originating from the 13th-century Watch and Ward which manned the City's walls against attack. A mobile force with excellent communications, it has pioneered crime prevention techniques by day and night, controlling the security of 48 miles of streets and offices. A specialist Fraud Department deals with company fraud.

Social Services

The Social Services Department has responsibilities for the welfare of City residents, of patients attending St. Bartholomew's and St. Mark's Hospitals, and of the City's homeless population.

Among the services provided are meals on wheels and home helps for frail elderly or disabled people, and advice, aids to daily living and help with transport for people whose physical disabilities make it difficult for them to cope.

Social work support and advice are available to hospital patients, to City residents and, in certain cases, to the City's large commuting population. Residential care is provided for elderly people who are no longer able to manage at home and day care for various client groups, including children under five. Assistance is also given to a number of local voluntary organisations who also provide welfare services.

THE LIVERY COMPANIES OF THE CITY OF LONDON

Like so many institutions in the City, the origin of the Companies is lost in antiquity, but in all probability they derive from the early mediaeval religious fraternities which were attached to many of the parish churches. In the middle ages it was customary for people working in the same trade to live in the same area, so that members of these fraternities were for the most part engaged in the same trade or craft. The main functions of the fraternities were originally religious and benevolent, but in the 12th century they began to be more concerned with the protection and regulation of their trades. So emerged the trade and craft guilds. These were more than mere trade associations, however; they united within themselves some of the basic functions of the modern trade unions, employers' associations, insurance and mutual benefit societies and social clubs. Over all these functions remained the religious aspect inherited from the fraternities, an inheritance which has never entirely been lost to the present day. The guilds gradually obtained complete control of their trades—a control for which they fought for centuries to maintain. With the development of industry and commerce both at home and abroad, the power of the companies began to wane and by the late 18th and early 19th centuries only a few of them had much direct connection with their trades. There are still, however, today a few which continue to have certain controlling powers within their trades, for example the Goldsmiths, Fishmongers and Gunmakers, and recently several new Companies of a predominantly professional character have been established; the others for the most part concerning themselves, as far as their trades are concerned, with providing educational courses and fostering technical research. The fraternal element is still active in the maintenance of almshouses, poor relief and other work. The craftguilds came to be called livery companies during the late 15th century, from the custom originating in the 14th century for the more prosperous members of a company to wear a distinctive clothing or livery on ceremonial occasions. From the early 14th century the only persons entitled to call themselves citizens were those who were members, or freemen as they were called, of the craft guilds (livery companies) and until 1835 the freedom of the City could be obtained only through such companies.

In mediaeval times the whole body of citizens, that is freemen, had the right to attend at Guildhall to elect the Sheriffs and the Mayor. By the mid-14th century, however, some restriction had to be placed on the number attending. This was done by allowing only the more prosperous freemen to take part in the elections. This led finally in 1475 to only those who wore the livery of a Company being entitled to elect the Mayor and the Sheriffs. This right of the liverymen has continued to the present day.

Until the Reform Act of 1832, the liverymen had the sole right of electing members of parliament for the City. The Reform Act preserved this right but also enfranchised certain house holders and occupiers in the City. Nearly a hundred years later the right of liverymen as such to exercise the parliamentary franchise in the City was abolished by the Representation of the People Act 1918, but the Act allowed those liverymen who also possessed a business qualification to vote as liverymen, if they so desired. This latter privilege was abolished by the Representation of the People Act 1948.

Although many of their rights have gone, liverymen continue to play an important part in the government of the City. They still have the right to elect the Lord Mayor on Michaelmas Day, and the Sheriffs and various officers, on Midsummer Day; furthermore most members of the Court of Common Council are liverymen.

The constitution of a livery company is the same today as it has been for centuries. There are three ranks of memberships namely freemen, liverymen and assistants. A person can become a freeman by one of three ways (a) by patrimony—that is through the father or mother of the applicant having been a freeman before the son or daughter was born, (b) by servitude—that is through having served a period of at least four years as an apprentice to a freeman, and (c) by redemption—that is by purchase. Election to the livery is the prerogative of the company who can elect any of its freemen to this status. Assistants are usually elected from the livery and form a Court of Assistants which is the governing body of the company. From the Court of Assistants are elected annually the Master (sometimes called Prime Warden) and the Wardens.

LONDON BOROUGHs

DUTIES AND FUNCTIONS

The 32 London Boroughs were constituted by the London Government Act 1963 with powers and duties far greater than those of the authorities they superseded. The following is a summary of the most important:—

Baths and public halls
 Cemeteries and crematoria
 Education and youth employment (except within Inner London Education Area)
 Electoral Registration.
 Environmental health services
 Food and drugs
 Housing and slum clearance
 Libraries, museums and art galleries
 Local roads—construction, maintenance, lighting and improvement
 Offices, Shops and Railway Premises Act
 Parking places for vehicles
 Parks and open spaces
 Personal Social Services
 Refuse collection and street cleansing
 Town planning—development control and preparation of borough development plan
 Weights and measures and other consumer protection and public control functions
 Following the abolition of the Greater London Council on 1st April 1986, the London Boroughs took over refuse disposal and traffic management duties, although for the former the duties are shared in groups of boroughs. A joint planning committee has been set up for the strategic planning functions formerly handled by the GLC.

TOPOGRAPHY

Barnet, one of the largest and most attractive of the London boroughs, lies on the north west of the Greater London complex, on the edge of the green belt. Within the borough are ten conservation areas, including the unique Hampstead Garden Suburb, and a large number of buildings of historic and architectural interest.

There is easy access to the City and West End of London by means of Underground and British Rail train services and London Transport buses. It is also served by the M1, the southern stretch of which runs through the western section of the borough, and the Great North Road which bisects the eastern side of the borough.

The Council makes generous provision for sport and recreation and there are large areas of open spaces, parks and recreation grounds with good facilities for all the traditional sports. Barnet Copthall Sports Centre, just off the M1, near the Great North Way, Hendon, has outstanding facilities for rugby football, soccer, cricket and hockey. The athletics stadium offers the largest all-weather running track in Europe with full facilities for both track and field events. The new swimming complex with three pools is designed to international standards with electronic timing equipment. There are three indoor sports centres elsewhere in the borough and a youth sailing base on the Welsh Harp.

The Old Bull Arts Centre is situated in Chipping Barnet and there are local museums at Church Farm, Hendon and Wood Street, Barnet. The Royal Air Force Museum is situated at Grahame Park on the site of the former Hendon Aerodrome. The National Newspaper Library is based in Colindale.

The Borough also contains the Brent Cross Shopping Centre which attracts visitors from all over the country and abroad with shops comparable to those of London's West End.

Mayoral annual allowance: £7,710.

TOPOGRAPHY

The London Borough of Bexley lies on the south eastern extremity of the metropolis, close to the Kent countryside. In the north it has a five mile frontage onto the River Thames, and spreads south from the river for some seven miles at its maximum giving a total area of just over 23 square miles.

The residential population is fairly evenly distributed throughout the Borough and is well served by public transport linking it with London and parts of Kent.

The Borough has an innovative housing programme including involvement in sheltered schemes for sale, equity sharing and co-operatives. Many internationally known firms have premises in Bexley and there are four main industrial areas at Erith, Crayford, Sidcup and Thamesmead.

Recreational facilities in Bexley include three indoor swimming centres at Bexleyheath, Erith and Sidcup, and a sports stadium at Erith and in addition there are some 1,186 acres of parks and open spaces. A sports and leisure centre at Crook Log, Bexleyheath provides squash courts, a multi-purpose sports hall and ancillary facilities. There are 14 libraries. Hall Place, a listed building, has a continual programme of exhibitions many with a strong local interest.

The highly successful Broadway Shopping Centre at Bexleyheath was opened by HRH The Duke of Edinburgh in 1984. The Town Centre redevelopment is well underway with new roads under construction and a major increase in shopping floor space opening up. In Crayford a major shopping redevelopment has been built in conjunction with the new Crayford Stadium.

TOPOGRAPHY

Camden is an Inner London Borough stretching from Holborn in the south to Hampstead and Highgate in the north.

The Borough contains a wide range of commercial and residential property. South of Euston Road the Borough forms part of Central London and contains a concentration of headquarters offices, two of the four Inns of Court, the principal parts of the London University, the British Museum and several major hospitals and the specialist shopping area of Tottenham Court Road.

North of Euston Road the Borough is primarily an Inner City residential area with a wide diversity of accommodation from palatial mansions in parts of Hampstead to overcrowded terraces in multiple occupation in Camden Town and Kilburn. The Borough contains many buildings and areas of historical and architectural interest such as the Bloomsbury Squares and Hampstead Heath.

Communications with other parts of the country are particularly good — Euston, St Pancras and King's Cross railway terminals are all situated on Euston Road.

TOPOGRAPHY

Croydon is the largest of the 32 London Boroughs in terms of population which approaches one third of a million. Some 68,000 of its inhabitants are below 16 years of age and 52,000 are of pensionable age. The Borough provides employment for about 150,000 and two thirds of that number live in the Borough whilst the balance travel in. At the same time approximately 64,000 commute out of the Borough each day.

Croydon stretches from Upper Norwood in the north to Coulsdon in the south and includes the localities of Addington, Kenley, New Addington, Norbury, Purley, Sanderstead, Selsdon, Shirley, South Norwood and Thornton Heath. The Borough contains some 116,000 households.

Croydon's post-war development has led to it becoming the largest office centre in the south of England outside central London and the leading shopping centre outside London's West End, well served by hotels.

Sports facilities include a sports arena, two sports centres and numerous pitches for many team games. There are also a number of golf courses in the Borough.

The Housing Department manages approximately 19,500 dwellings including some which are specially designed or adapted for the elderly, the physically handicapped and the mentally ill. It also provides a comprehensive housing service to all sections of the community.

Croydon's schools are organised on comprehensive lines and in response to falling rolls, have changed to a system of sixth form colleges and a centre of studies for 16 to 19-year-olds based on Croydon College. In addition the college caters for about 1,800 full-time and some 8,000 part-time students. The Borough is also well served by many independent schools for both girls and boys.

The Council owns and operates Fairfield Halls—one of the finest centres of arts and entertainment in the south east comprising in addition to a concert hall, theatre and exhibition gallery, restaurant and catering facilities for all types of functions.

Croydon's Community Charge is still among the lowest in London—a fact which makes it attractive to both commerce and industry as well as being a favoured residential area.

A Mayoral allowance is paid.

TOPOGRAPHY

Ealing is a West London borough formed in 1965 which includes the areas of Ealing, Acton, Hanwell, Southall, Northolt, Perivale and Greenford.

It is a borough of contrasts with areas of prosperity but also with areas which show significant levels of urban deprivation.

It is also a multi-racial borough with one of the major centres of Asian population in the country in Southall and with a substantial Afro-Caribbean community in Acton, and with the largest Polish and Armenian communities in the country together with Irish, French, and Japanese communities.

There are 1,900 acres of parks and open spaces and the borough is a frequent winner of the London in Bloom competition for its trees and flowers. More than 3,350 trees were planted by the council last year as part of a continuing programme to replace the damage caused by the hurricane of October 1987. The borough also won an award from the London Tourist Board for the cleanest borough in London.

There are also significant areas of industry and commerce in the area including London's largest industrial area at Park Royal. There is a new shopping centre in central Ealing which houses the Central Library with further town centre developments planned for Acton and Southall.

The borough is strategically placed for transport and communication links with easy access to central London through a direct British Rail line to Paddington, and Central, Piccadilly and District underground lines as well as a number of bus routes and links to the M4 and M40.

There is a thriving voluntary sector with more than 1,000 groups working in partnership with the council through its unique Unified Community Action scheme.

Mayoral annual allowance: £9,700 (Mayor £8,300, Deputy £1,400).

TOPOGRAPHY

The London Borough of Enfield, is located on the northern edge of Greater London (being 12 miles north of the City) and adjoins the Hertfordshire and Essex countryside. Over one quarter of the Borough—mainly in the northwest—is Green Belt land in use as country parks, open spaces and for farming. Thus Enfield has the advantage of being close to central London, whilst much of it has the feel of a country town. This is enhanced by its many handsome buildings located in the Borough's fourteen Conservation Areas.

At the same time Enfield has a large and diverse industrial base providing the Borough with a broadly spread and healthy economy. Several leading manufacturers are based in the Borough especially in the fields of electrical and electronic engineering. The Borough's position in relation to the motorway and main road network makes it an ideal location for distribution and warehousing.

Enfield has some 103,500 dwellings over 70% are owner-occupied. Some 16,943 of the dwelling units are owned by the Council.

Enfield's Social Services are focussed on enabling people to live safely and independently in their own homes.

There are five main shopping centres, including England's largest local authority built shopping centre at Edmonton Green. A modern £20 M. shopping precinct has been built at Enfield Town in partnership with the Council and became fully operational in 1983.

The Borough is well served with public transport, there being four British Rail surface lines to Central London, as well as the underground (Piccadilly Line). The North Circular (A406 runs across the Borough close to its southern boundary, whilst the M25 runs across the northern part of the Borough linking the A1 to M11 and the Dartford Tunnel. Already there is speedy access from the Borough to the M1 and A1. The main north south Road is the Cambridge Road (A10), however an additional North/South Road is currently under construction in the eastern side of the Borough which is due for completion by April 1991.

The Borough is well provided with recreational and sports facilities, both public and private. These include 7 Golf Courses, 8 Sports Halls, numerous parks and Club facilities. The Lea Valley Regional Park Authority is responsible for developing and managing a wide range of major recreational facilities in the Lea Valley, along the eastern boundary of the Borough. Picketts Lock Recreation Centre provides year round covered facilities for most sports and leisure activities.

Enfield is also well provided with cultural facilities, including 16 libraries, 1 museum and 2 art centres run by the council. There is also a 400 seat theatre.

Mayoral annual allowance: £6,850.

TOPOGRAPHY

The borough comprises the districts of Charlton, Eltham, Greenwich, New Eltham, Plumstead, Woolwich and parts of Abbey Wood, Blackheath, Mottingham and Thamesmead.

It has a river frontage of nearly 9 miles and is exceptionally well endowed with public open spaces which cover some 1,750 acres of common land, woodlands, formal parks and playing fields.

In the north-eastern sector of the borough, partly on land formerly occupied by the Royal Arsenal, the new community of Thamesmead was developed by the Greater London Council in co-operation with the London Boroughs of Bexley and Greenwich. This imaginative and extensive planning project includes facilities for water sports and a marina, and will ultimately provide new housing for a total population of 45-48,000 with supporting social services and amenities.

Education in Greenwich is the responsibility of the Inner London Education Authority. (See Inner London Education Authority.)

Greenwich is known internationally as the centre of world time and is rich in historical associations. Within its boundaries lie the Royal Naval College: the National Maritime Museum which includes the Old Royal Observatory and Planetarium; the "Cutty Sark", "Gipsy Moth IV"; Eltham Palace; the headquarters of the Royal Artillery (Woolwich Garrison) and the former Royal Military Academy; the Rotunda Museum; Tudor Barn at Well Hall; and Charlton House—a stately and well preserved Jacobean mansion.

Under the Civic Amenities Act 1967 ten areas of the borough have been designated as Conservation Areas.

The Council provides amenities by way of both recreational facilities and entertainment and maintains seven centres for community activities.

As part of a comprehensive welfare scheme the Council owns sea-front hotels at Westgate-on-Sea and Eastbourne to provide assisted holidays for elderly Greenwich residents.

Greenwich has established links of friendship with two European municipalities—Reinickendorf in West Berlin and Maribor in Yugoslavia.

The Mayoral allowance is £3,950.

TOPOGRAPHY

The London Borough of Hackney stretches from Liverpool Street in the south to Stamford Hill in the north, and from the River Lea in the east to Finsbury in the west. A more densely built-up area in Greater London would be difficult to find.

The whole area has a long and interesting history starting from Roman times. With its then close proximity to the Roman city of Londinium, it is not surprising that there have been many finds of flint weapons and of coffins and coins. Even the remains of a mammal were discovered as recently as 1960.

The names of Hackney, Shoreditch and Stoke Newington have their origins in Anglo-Saxon times, and they remained very largely rural in character until the beginning of the 19th century as the census reports of 1801 show. Many famous names in history appear in the long chronicles of the district, — James Burbage who built the first theatre in Britain, Pepys and his Diary, The Great Plague with 2,000 deaths in the locality, Dr. Priestley the discoverer of oxygen, Daniel Defoe and his famous book of Robinson Crusoe, and the highwayman Dick Turpin.

Today the Hackney Council has a mammoth task in catering for the needs of 180,000 residents. There are many demands on the Council, and priorities have to be carefully decided. Hackney is an Inner City Partnership Authority.

TOPOGRAPHY

Hammersmith and Fulham is situated to the west of the Central area and close to the eastern end of the M4. Both the A4 and the A40 pass through the Borough which is also served by four London Transport railway lines (Central, Metropolitan, Piccadilly and District). The River Thames forms the Borough's southern boundary which is crossed by three road bridges (Hammersmith, Putney and Wandsworth).

Although one of the smaller London Boroughs (covering about 6½ square miles) Hammersmith and Fulham is densely populated. It contains a substantial mix of housing types with roughly equal proportions of owner-occupied, council and privately rented accommodation. The Borough contains a wide variety of industrial and commercial activities. The BBC Television Centre at Wood Lane is situated within the area. Other major employers include Marconi-Osram, George Wimpey, Bechtel, Rolls Royce and Island and Polygram Records and some major hotels such as the Ramada Inn and Novotel.

The Borough contains three major shopping centres at Hammersmith, Shepherds Bush and Fulham. Also located within the Borough are three football league clubs (Queen's Park Rangers, Chelsea and Fulham) two theatres (the Lyric and the Riverside Studios), the Olympia Exhibition Centre and five hospitals (Hammersmith, West London, Charing Cross, Queen Charlotte's Maternity and The Royal Masonic).

TOPOGRAPHY

The place name Haringey is a medieval form of the modern name Hornsey.

Although an outer London Borough, Haringey has all the problems of the inner-city. It has a wide multi-ethnic mix, and is currently pressing the government for recognition of its special problems.

On a more positive note, the borough, although largely residential, also contains some light industry principally in Tottenham. The main industries are engineering, clothing and confectionery making.

Tottenham also contains Bruce Castle where the postal reformer Sir Rowland Hill lived for a period, and the famous Tottenham Hotspur Football Club. The museum at Bruce Castle contains a wealth of local archive and postal history material as well as a fine military section. Tottenham includes about five square miles of the Lee Valley now being developed as a recreation centre as part of the Lee Valley Regional Park.

Hornsey is mainly residential and includes Highgate, Muswell Hill and Crouch End. It lies about five miles north of the River Thames in the Northern Heights of London. Many of its roads are tree-lined and attractive wayside gardens are a noticeable feature along with several fine large open spaces including Finsbury Park, Highgate and Queen's Wood.

Wood Green, another attractive residential district, has been developed as one of the largest shopping and service centres in London, providing a wide range of facilities. It contains the recently completed Wood Green Shopping City, a modern covered shopping centre, incorporating car parking, offices, housing and a creche, as well as a number of major stores. Many of its pleasant streets climb to the breezy heights of Alexandra Palace and Park, the playground of North London and the original home of BBC Television. The Palace is now administered by Haringey and after a major fire has been redeveloped into a popular exhibition and leisure centre. Wood Green contains the administrative centre of the Borough. The former administrative centres at Hornsey and Tottenham Town Halls now house other corporation services.

Mayoral annual allowance: £12,900.

TOPOGRAPHY

Essentially a residential area (20 sq. miles and a population of 201,400) approximately 10 miles north-west of Charing Cross, Harrow, embraces a numerically small, thriving industrial element, generous areas of parkland, open space and woodlands, plus some of the most attractive parts of the green belt. The facilities offered by these rural and park areas are complemented by a comprehensive range of leisure and recreational facilities including a Council-owned leisure centre covering about 2 acres, in the geographical centre of the borough.

Phase One of the Central Harrow redevelopment, including shops, offices and a large departmental store, was completed in November 1980 by Harrow Council in partnership with Laings. Phase Two, the enclosed St. Ann's Centre was completed and opened for trading in October 1987 and includes four large space users, unit shops, small speciality units, spacious food counts and multi-storey car park. Both phases were undertaken by Harrow Council in partnership with Laing Properties.

The first local authority purpose-built "off-the-road" driving centre (covering 6.5 acres) was opened in 1973. The centre has proved to be a very popular facility and has attracted parties from all over the world.

Pinner Fair, held annually, is one of the few remaining street fairs of its kind in the country. The fair originated from a Royal Charter—granted by Edward III in 1336, and invariably attracts a vast attendance.

The spire of St. Mary's, Harrow on the Hill, and the surrounding buildings of the famous public school dominate the landscape and provide both an historic link and a useful landmark.

Mayoral annual allowance 1990/91: £8,940.

TOPOGRAPHY

The London Borough of Havering is the second largest of the London Boroughs, with a frontage of 3½ miles to the River Thames.

The Council owns and controls community centres, purpose-built youth centres, allotments, 10 libraries, 4 public swimming pools and over 2,500 acres of parks and open spaces providing facilities for a variety of sports. The Dolphin Centre in Romford, opened in 1982, features a leisure pool with dry beach and wave machine together with a first-class banqueting suite and function rooms, sauna solaria suite, multi gym, creche. A sports centre at Hornchurch consists of 2 court sports hall, sauna solaria suite, multi gym, activities room, 4 squash courts, bar, cafeteria and all ancillary facilities. The Romford Ice Rink opened in February 1987 and encompasses a 56 x 26 m ice pad, with spectator seating for 1250, function room, Club room, bar and cafeteria. The Council also maintains a civic theatre—the original Queen's was opened in 1953. A new theatre was opened in April 1975.

The Borough is mainly residential but there are important industrial areas in Rainham, Romford and Harold Hill and there is considerable potential for further industrial development at Rainham.

Romford's 9 acre pedestrianised shopping centre, constructed in the late sixties, offers some of the finest shopping facilities in the south-east. Soon to be totally refurbished, the centre will shortly be enhanced by two impressive new developments, adjacent to the Dolphin and on the north side of the Market Place. Along with the long-awaited development of the 'coal yard' site next to Romford Station it is estimated that around 3,000 new jobs could be created in Romford over the next few years. Car parking capacity exceeds 3,500 with 4 multi-storey parks.

There has been an official Market in Romford since the year 1247. Originally for the sale of cattle, leather and farm produce, it became more general in character and is now held on Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays. The Market has been under the control of the Local Authority since 1892. A new speciality and antiques market was opened in 1977.

The Borough twinned, in 1971, with the German town of Ludwigshafen, the large chemical centre on the Rhine.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough is approximately 14 miles west of Marble Arch and is bounded by the counties of Hertfordshire, Buckinghamshire and Surrey and by the London Boroughs of Harrow, Ealing and Hounslow.

Many parts of the Borough were mentioned in the Domesday Book and the area has several historic buildings—amongst them the Jacobean Mansion "Swakeleys" at Ickenham. It was from the underground control centre at RAF Uxbridge that the Battle of Britain was largely directed.

In addition Hillingdon has many modern industries of a national and international character, for instance Heinz and Thorn EMI. Almost the whole of Heathrow Airport London lies within the Borough's southern boundary and Brunel University is at Uxbridge.

The Borough is fortunate too in having large tracts of green belt, parks and open space, including Ruislip Lido, amounting to over 12,000 acres in all.

Mayoral annual allowance: hospitality £2,200; personal £4,000.

TOPOGRAPHY

Hounslow is an attractive Borough of contrasts—from the business parks of Feltham and the Great West Road to the quiet secluded riverside communities of Chiswick and Strand-on-the-Green.

One of the major Boroughs of outer London, it stretches from Hammersmith in the east to Heathrow Airport in the west and from the M4 motorway in the north to the Richmond and Sunbury borders to the south. It is a multi-racial borough with one person in six from an ethnic minority background.

The Council emphasises the concept of community based care while recognising that there will always be a need for some residential homes. Families caring for mentally handicapped adults have benefited from the provision of a hostel where half the places are allocated for phased and relief care.

Isleworth Riverside, Strand-on-the-Green, Old Chiswick, Hanworth Park, Heston Village, Bedford Park, Turnham Green, Chiswick House area, The Butts, Brentford, Bedfont Green, Osterley Park, St. Stephens Road and St. Pauls casement area have been declared Conservation Areas, for the purpose of protecting the existing character of these areas.

Besides providing several of the main shopping and residential areas of West London, the Borough has a number of notable houses of architectural and historical merit—Syon House, Osterley House, Boston Manor House, Chiswick House, Hogarth's House and Gunnersbury House.

There is a community recreation development team attracting new participants to sports and an extensive programme of recreation in the community, including play, football and tennis.

The Watermans Arts Centre, overlooking the River Thames in Brentford, has a cinema, theatre, exhibition gallery, cafeteria and bar, and organises cultural events and workshops.

Hounslow Centre Space Theatre is part of a large complex which includes the Central Library, Community Services, cafeterias and licensed bar, and covered pedestrian shopping areas.

There are 87 schools in the Borough—65 primary, 14 secondary, 7 special, 1 further educational, 3 tuition centres, 2 persistent non-attenders units (P.N.A.'s), 1 schools Language unit.

An additional feature to the established services of the Council is an Advice Centre containing the Citizens' Advice Bureau, Community Relations Council, Volunteer Bureau and Consumer Advice Service.

The community is well served for the loan of books, recordings, video cassettes and pictures by the three area libraries and eight local libraries, and the museums at Hogarth's House and Gunnersbury which have a wide-ranging exhibition programme are popular attractions.

Mayoral annual allowance: £6,410.

TOPOGRAPHY

This Inner London Borough lies with Haringey to the North, Camden and Hackney to the West and East, and the City of London to the South.

The area lies among historical traditions connected with parliament, parliament and education (particularly technology). Sadlers Wells, the internationally known home of opera and ballet, is in the south of the Borough; nearby is the site of the once-famous Collins Music Hall. Light industry and craft work, such as clock-making and jewellery, are firmly established in Clerkenwell. The interests of education are strongly represented by a number of Further Education establishments, such as the City University and the Polytechnic of North London. St. John's Gate, at Clerkenwell, is one of the oldest surviving buildings in the Borough. A beautiful early 16th century structure amid modern surroundings, it houses a collection of silver, paintings and furniture illustrating all periods of the history of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem. For those who prefer their works of art to carry a price-ticket, Camden Passage (off Islington High Street) is a world-famous antiques centre housing over sixty elegant shops; an open-air market is held every Wednesday and Saturday.

Football enthusiasts are well served in Islington; Arsenal Stadium, at Highbury, is the home of the Arsenal Football Club. In November, 1971, the Council installed Europe's first full-size artificial turf football pitch at Caledonian Park; used for over 1,000 games per year, it has changing-room facilities for both male and female players.

The south of the Borough is predominantly commercial and industrial in character, with a small residential population, while the northern part is mainly residential. Due to the proximity of Main Line railway termini and work centres, the Borough is densely occupied and one of the major problems facing the Council is that of dealing with housing conditions. The Council has a housing stock of approximately 42,000 dwellings.

Due to intensive building development over the past 150 years, Islington is sadly deficient in open space; although immediately adjoining are large open areas at Waterlow Park, Clissold Park and Finsbury Park. Open space provision within the Borough itself consists mainly of Highbury Fields, the recently extended Barnard Park, and a charming linear park called New River Walk, some 1½ miles long; there are also many small and pleasant squares.

Advisory Health Circles for the elderly are in operation and a Smoking Advisory Clinic is held.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Royal Borough, brought into being on 1st April 1965, embraces Kingston upon Thames, Kingston Vale, Coombe, New Malden, Old Malden, Berrylands, Kingston Hill, Norbiton, Surbiton, Tolworth, Hook and Chessington.

A pleasant residential area with the amenities of the Thames and splendid open parklands close at hand, and within easy reach of Central London, it is also a thriving commercial and shopping centre, and supports a number of light industries.

Kingston and the surrounding area is rich in history. Many royal charters, dating from 1208, are in the possession of the Council, and the Coronation Stone believed to have been used at the crowning of seven Anglo-Saxon Kings, is displayed beside the Guildhall. Nearby stands the 12th century Clattern Bridge spanning the Hogsmill River, and the Market, which has existed from at least the 13th century.

Recreation facilities are provided by 690 acres of public parks and open spaces. Three golf courses are leased by the Council to private clubs and a number of organisations have private sports grounds in the area.

Education is provided by 2 nursery schools, 36 primary schools, 10 secondary schools, and 3 special schools. There is also Kingston College of Further Education and the Kingston Polytechnic. In addition there are a number of independent schools including the Kingston Grammar School, founded in 1561 by Queen Elizabeth I, and Surbiton High School. There are six libraries, a museum and an art gallery.

Mayoral annual allowance: £16,000.

TOPOGRAPHY

Lambeth has a larger population than any of the other Inner London Boroughs.

Lambeth's 215 miles of road spread from the 2½ miles Thames frontage (which includes the approaches to the Waterloo, Hungerford, Westminster, Lambeth and Vauxhall bridges) to the Inner London boundary at Croydon.

The Town Hall, a fine building, includes a well equipped Assembly Hall and meeting rooms which are available for hire. Many notable buildings are situated in the Borough, such as Lambeth Palace, The County Hall, The Royal Festival Hall, The National Film Theatre, the Oval Cricket Ground, the Shell Centre and The Old Vic theatre. The National Theatre on the South Bank is also in Lambeth.

There are two teaching hospitals in the Borough, including St. Thomas', the largest in London, and King's College. London's largest railway terminus, Waterloo, and 13 other stations serve the Borough, as well as 11 underground stations.

The Borough contains 656 acres of parks and open spaces. On 1st April 1971 the Borough Council took over from the Greater London Council the maintenance of approximately 540 acres of public open space. The open spaces transferred included major parks like Brockwell Park and Kennington Park as well as Streatham Common and Clapham Common. There are open-air swimming pools in two of these parks and the only windmill in Inner London is at Windmill Gardens.

The Council establishments include 13 public libraries and a further library is operated jointly with Croydon. There is a major Central Reference library and collections of gramophone records at 6 of the public libraries. Lambeth Crematorium and cemetery and Streatham cemetery are at Tooting as well as another cemetery and crematorium at West Norwood. Fifteen Day Nurseries are operated by the Council. There are seven works depots, three public indoor swimming pools and a public laundry in the Borough.

The Mayoral allowance is £9,200.

TOPOGRAPHY

Lewisham covers 13.7 square miles and is bounded by the boroughs of Southwark, Bromley and Greenwich and, at its northernmost point, by a short stretch of the Thames.

It is very much a dormitory suburb but there is also some industry, particularly to the north of the borough, though local employment, as in South-East London generally, has been declining in recent years. To encourage potential employment the Council is developing new industrial estates notably around the former Surrey Canal in Deptford.

Deptford is particularly rich in history. Samuel Pepys was, as Secretary to the Navy, a frequent visitor to Deptford docks. Another distinguished visitor to Deptford in days gone by was Peter the Great, Czar of Russia, who as a young man served a shipbuilding apprenticeship in the dockyard. The existence of the docks in the north of the borough is recognized by the fact that Lewisham is one of the five Docklands boroughs.

Deptford today is the scene of an important urban renewal scheme. The High Street, site of a popular Saturday market, has been improved by a facelift scheme, and a new leisure centre is being built in the area, providing a swimming pool, a variety of sport and community facilities, within the complex.

There are other good local shopping centres in Catford, Forest Hill, Sydenham and Lee Green. Central Lewisham is one of the six strategic shopping centres in London and as the first phase of a major redevelopment scheme now has a large covered precinct complete with a multi-storey car park and a leisure centre incorporating a sports hall and the Riverdale Hall, which is available for public entertainment as well as for private hire. A smaller redevelopment scheme at Catford includes another pedestrian shopping precinct close to the island complex that comprises the Town Hall with its new civic suite opened in 1971 and the 1,000-seat Lewisham Theatre.

Sport is provided for by the Lewisham Leisure Centre mentioned above and by the Crofton Leisure Centre, which is run by the Borough jointly with the ILEA. In addition there are many local sports clubs and a municipal golf course at Beckenham Place Park. There are nearly 800 acres of open space in the borough.

The Horniman Museum at Forest Hill has an important anthropological collection and specialises also in natural history and musical instruments. Goldsmiths' College, part of the University of London, which as well as providing degree courses is one of the largest teacher training institutions in Europe, is situated in New Cross. The college's School of Adult and Community Studies plays an important part in community life.

TOPOGRAPHY

Merton is an Anglo-Saxon name for "the farm by the pool". The farm in question was constructed about AD 76 where a Roman road crossed the River Wandle.

The word Merton is now used to describe a progressive Outer London Borough situated in the south-west of Greater London covering an area of 9,380 acres and home to 164,000 people. The Borough provides a diversity of commercial opportunities; ample facilities for sport and recreation, and a high percentage of open parkland.

The Borough is well served with all types of public transport facilitating an easy journey to the city (Wimbledon-Waterloo approx. 12 minutes), the south coast and Gatwick Airport.

Commercial and Industrial.

Although the Borough has a residential character, there is a substantial amount of industry and commerce.

Mitcham's industry began in 1610 by utilising the water power of the River Wandle. Further industrial estates have been developed and sites owned by the Council provide both factory units and land for factory building which may be purchased or rented, but the needs of commerce have not been overlooked.

Education

As an education authority, Merton opted for a three-tier system that provides primary schools (5-9), middle schools (9-13) and high schools (13-18). Further education is provided by the Merton Technical College and the Wimbledon School of Art, backed by Adult Education Centres.

Sport and Recreation.

As some 2,634 acres of the Borough are devoted to parks, recreation grounds and public open spaces, the Council were able to take the opportunity to provide a vast range of sports pitches, designed to cater for most tastes. However, for the less sport orientated, there are some very colourful flower gardens, a riverside walk and an annual programme of outdoor entertainment which appeals to most. These summer presentations include orchestras, choirs, art exhibitions, steam rallies, to name but a few. Children are provided with special shows throughout the school summer holidays.

Mayoral annual allowance £11,390.

TOPOGRAPHY

The London Borough of Redbridge came into being in 1965. The name Redbridge comes from the Red (brick) Bridge which once spanned the River Roding, the boundary between the former boroughs of Ilford and Wanstead and Woodford.

Redbridge is principally residential in character but has some new industrial estates and important industries—light engineering and the manufacture of telecommunications equipment. It has many large shops and offices and Ilford is an important regional shopping and commercial centre. Work is well in hand on the revival of Ilford Town Centre. A relief road takes through-traffic to the south of Ilford High Road and a major part of the High Road is a pedestrian precinct. A major new shopping centre with additional car parking is nearly complete. A new Central Library was opened by HRH The Duke of Gloucester on February 25, 1986. The South Woodford to Barking relief road connects Ilford and other centres in the borough directly to the M.11 and the A.13 trunk roads and the national motorway network.

The Kenneth More Theatre was built by the Council in 1975 in Ilford. A Leisure Centre was built at the same time, in the grounds of the Wanstead High School; it is "dual use". There is also a community-based Sports Centre at Barkingside. There are 26 completed sheltered housing schemes providing places for some 1,370 elderly and handicapped people. A Communications Centre provides 24 hr monitoring for over 5,000 elderly and vulnerable residents via community alarm systems. Redbridge leads the country in this field.

Recreational facilities in Redbridge include two public swimming pools, and one outdoor pool in Valentines Park. There are twenty-seven parks and recreation grounds in the Borough, totalling 854 acres, with facilities for football, cricket, bowls and tennis. The Borough is fortunate that, in addition to many acres of public and private open space, it has some 1,250 acres of Epping Forest and Hainault Forest within its boundaries.

The Country Park at Fairlop is complete and provides both an 18-hole and 9-hole golf course, driving range, sailing, angling and country park facilities.

Mayoral (and Deputy Mayor's) annual allowance: £15,800.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough stretches from the River Thames to Crystal Palace, and contains a variety of industrial, commercial and residential development. The northern part of the Borough is mainly commercial and industrial, whilst the southern part is mainly residential. The whole area was subjected to heavy aerial bombardment during World War II, particularly in the riverside and dock areas of Bermondsey and Rotherhithe, which are now the subject of extensive redevelopment plans.

Two cathedrals are situated in the Borough—Southwark Cathedral, adjacent to London Bridge, and St. George's (RC) Cathedral in St. George's Road, about one-quarter mile from the Elephant and Castle.

The Borough is fortunate in possessing numerous Open Spaces totalling in all some 366 acres including Peckham Rye and Park, Southwark Park and Lady Geraldine Harmsworth Park.

The South London Art Gallery was reopened in 1949 after having been closed by enemy action, the Cuming Museum in Walworth Road houses a collection illustrative of life in the area from the earliest times to the present day, and the Livesey Museum in the Old Kent Road displays changing exhibitions of local interest.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough comprises three former Essex Boroughs and adjoins the Metropolitan green belt and is bounded by Epping Forest and the valley of the River Lea. It is predominantly a residential area with belts of industry and is linked directly with central London by train and bus services.

The Borough has 400 acres of Park and Open Space within its boundary as well as generous provision for outdoor sport and play. In addition there are 5 main indoor leisure centres with one under construction providing a wider range of pursuits and 2 more currently under construction.

It is from the words of William Morris, the poet, craftsman and artist, who lived at one time in Walthamstow, that the Borough takes its motto, "Fellowship is Life".

TOPOGRAPHY

The City of Westminster occupies a pivotal position within London, and the country as a whole. Within its boundaries are found Buckingham Palace, 10 Downing Street, the Houses of Parliament and most major Government Departments, as are Westminster Abbey, the Roman Catholic Westminster Cathedral, and the London Central Mosque. Westminster is home to many major theatres and cinemas, the Royal Albert Hall, Royal Opera House and English National Opera. It contains countless restaurants, especially in Soho, numerous hotels and many of London's most famous shops. Five major parks, and many smaller green areas, provide light, colour and fresh air.

176,000 people live in Westminster, and each day tourists and workers boost this figure to one million—half a million people travel in to Westminster daily to their work. Four main railway lines terminate in Westminster, all Underground lines pass beneath its streets, and coaches go out from the Victoria coach station to destinations throughout the United Kingdom. The area is administered by a directly elected City Council, which provides social services, housing (23,000 council dwellings), libraries, refuse collection and street cleaning, and is the main highway and planning authority; 60 per cent of Westminster has been designated conservation areas, and overall the City contains over 9,000 buildings of architectural or historic significance. The City of Westminster has the largest rateable value of all local authorities in England and Wales, amounting to one sixth of the total for London.

Mayoral annual allowance: £20,400.

METROPOLITAN DISTRICT COUNCILS IN ENGLAND

The Local Government Act 1972 created with effect from 1st April 1974 thirty-six metropolitan district councils in England with wider powers than other district councils elsewhere in England and Wales. They operated within six metropolitan county areas, viz. Greater Manchester, Merseyside, South Yorkshire, Tyne and Wear, West Midlands and West Yorkshire. Following legislation in 1985 to abolish these six metropolitan county councils, the metropolitan district councils became almost autonomous. There are no metropolitan districts in Wales.

Elections

Elections are normally held on the first Thursday in May each year except in those years when County Council elections are held; the next county council elections are in 1993.

In Metropolitan Districts, councillors are elected for a term of four years and one-third retire each year, except for the year in which county council elections are held. The present spread of elections is over the years 1991, 1992 and 1994.

Functions

Metropolitan district councils undertake all functions performed by local authorities, either directly or through representation on county-wide bodies such as Police, and Fire and Civil Defence Authorities.

CO-ORDINATING COMMITTEES AND RESIDUARY BODIES

Co-ordinating committees were established for each of the metropolitan counties to co-ordinate the run-up to abolition and the transfer of functions to the metropolitan boroughs. Similarly residuary bodies have been established for each of the abolished counties, consisting of a chairman and members appointed by the Secretary of State for the Environment. They are responsible for repayment of loans taken out by the abolished counties; redundancy and compensation payments; superannuation and pensions (unless otherwise provided for); property, rights and liabilities not transferred to successor authorities; and preparation of the final accounts of the MCCs.

REGISTRATION OF BIRTHS, DEATHS AND MARRIAGES

In the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys, the Director and Registrar General controls the local registration service in England and Wales in the exercise of the registration and marriage duties in accordance with the Births and Deaths Registration Act 1953, the Registration Service Act 1953, the Marriage Acts 1949 to 1970, the Children Act 1975 and other relevant enactments.

There are 421 registration districts in England and Wales and the Superintendent Registrars act within the framework of the non-metropolitan county councils, the metropolitan district councils and the London Borough Councils. Their districts are not, however, always co-terminous with present local authority boundaries and a district council area may spread into more than one registration district (RD) or a number of district councils be contained in one registration district. The thirty-seven registration areas in Greater London are listed in Section 37.

The detailed list below indicates this spread of area responsibility by quoting the office address of each superintendent registrar operating within the boundaries of the respective local authorities.

In Scotland the registration districts are co-terminous within the boundaries of the nine regional councils and the three islands councils. (Further information on the General Register Office of Births, Deaths and Marriages (Scotland) appears in Section 43.)

TOPOGRAPHY

Barnsley's strategic position, within a framework formed by the M1, M62, M18 motorways and the A1, provides ready access to all parts of the country, including the east and west coast seaports, and there are three major airports, Manchester, Leeds/Bradford, and East Midlands, which can be reached mainly by motorway, all only about an hour's car drive from the area.

While the area is still best known for its traditional industries, coal mining and glass making, it has become, over the last few years, an area where there is a wide variety of industry with such household name firms as Lyons, Shaw Carpets, S.R. Gent and Slazenger employing large work forces.

Hundreds of acres of land have been specially earmarked for industrial expansion on well placed sites throughout the borough, and the Council has its own Employment Division at the Barnsley Enterprise Centre, where advice and assistance are freely available. The Council also has its own schemes for factory building and financial assistance and has recently opened one of the country's first business innovation centres for the encouragement of hi-tech industry.

Barnsley is recognised as a busy commercial centre and it has a modern shopping centre, with pedestrianised areas.

Natural beauty abounds within easy reach of all urban areas and there are some absorbing places of interest to visit, such as Cannon Hall, a country house museum and art gallery at Cawthorne, a beautifully restored working mill at Worsbrough and the ruins of Monk Bretton Priory, which was founded by the Cluniac monks in the 12th century.

There is a wide choice of recreational facilities. In fact, it would be difficult to find a recreational activity not catered for.

House prices are among the cheapest in the country and new developments, both private and municipal, offer properties ranging from the compact semi to the luxury executive home.

Mayoral annual allowance: £5,350.

TOPOGRAPHY

Birmingham is one of the world's great cities, a city renowned for its vision, enterprise, philanthropy and entrepreneurial skill. The city that earned the tag, city of 1,001 trades has long been acknowledged as a business, industrial and communication centre.

The vision and foresight that made the city the workshop of the world is alive and well today. The city made an ambitious bid to host the 1992 Olympic Games and stages Birmingham's Super Prix.

This boldness has been matched by the City's cultural revolution, led by the charismatic young Maestro, Simon Rattle, the City of Birmingham Symphony Orchestra enjoys a world-wide reputation.

The world renowned Sadlers Wells Ballet Company—to be renamed Birmingham Royal Ballet is to make the City its new home as is the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company.

As well as making the headlines for these high-profile activities the City is responsible for providing services for just under 1,000,000 people—the greatest number of any Metropolitan District in England and Wales. It is the City's biggest employer and has a revenue and capital expenditure budget comparable with many of the industrial giants in the Midlands. The City council's area covers more than 100 square miles.

Birmingham has weathered the economic storms of the 80s and next year sees the opening of Europe's first purpose built £150m International Convention Centre.

TOPOGRAPHY

Metropolitan Bolton is a major centre of industry and commerce which has seen rapid change in recent years. Once largely dependent on the textile manufacturing industry, the Borough has met the challenge of modern industrial times by diversifying its manufacturing into new industry, particularly engineering. The transition has been aided considerably by Bolton's excellent motorway and railway communications.

In the north, the district rises into the foothills of the Pennines with its spectacular moorland dotted here and there with picturesque reservoirs. This, along with the Anglezarke and Rivington areas and the Croal River Valley, provides Bolton people with ample opportunity for outdoor recreation of all kinds.

Bolton has many other notable features including one of the finest Town Halls and pedestrian precincts in the country, historic Churchgate, the Octagon Theatre, the Central Art Gallery and Museum, Museum of Local History, St. George's Craft Centre and a huge variety of shops including the recently opened Market Place Development, markets and entertainments. Nearby are historic Hall i'th' Wood, where Samuel Crompton invented the Spinning Mule in 1779, Smithills Hall and Firwood Fold, many fine parks, 11 golf courses, seven swimming pools, one leisure centre, one leisure pool and seven sports centres.

Mayoral annual allowance: £4,950.

TOPOGRAPHY

The industrial and commercial centre of Bradford Metropolitan District is the city of Bradford and its direct links with the motorway network are increasing its importance in this respect. However, whilst Bradford dominates the District in terms of population and industrial output, the other towns, though smaller, make a valuable contribution to the economic and cultural vitality of the area.

The District is divided in two by the Aire Valley, and it is in this valley that the industry is concentrated, in such towns as Keighley and Shipley. Historically the area has always been associated with wool and textiles but industrial activity now covers a much wider range. Keighley, for example, is well known for its high quality machine tools and the engineering and electrical industries are well represented in the area. Many years' experience of international trading has helped to develop considerable commercial expertise, particularly in banking, insurance, exporting and marketing. Other industries include a thriving high technology sector, mail order and expanding tourism industry.

The District is not wholly industrial, however. To the North West dairy farming predominates, whilst to the West are the wild moors of Brontë Country and the village of Haworth, celebrated home of the Brontë Sisters and Britain's second most visited literary shrine, attracting over 1 million visitors per year. North East is Ilkley Moor, immortalised in Yorkshire's 'national anthem' and Ilkley itself, a popular Victorian spa town and inland resort serving the Yorkshire Dales.

Leisure activities are well catered for with plentiful facilities for a wide range of pursuits, indoor and outdoor. In addition to provision for swimming, athletics and similar activities, a number of multi-purpose leisure and sports centres are being developed. The Council administers a number of public halls including the completely refurbished Alhambra Theatre, one of the greatest theatres of the North, situated in Bradford's own 'West End', home to many top National productions. A wide variety of community activities are catered for here and at the 2000-capacity St. George's Hall Complex. The Council administers large areas of parkland and public open space and there is an 18-hole municipal golf course at the St Ives Estate, Bingley.

The National Museum of Photography, Film and Television explores the art and science of photography, film and television and features popular interactive displays. It also has the UK's largest (52' x 64') cinema screen: IMAX and boasts over 3/4 of a million visitors per year. 1990 sees further expansion of the Museum with TV-am, a live, transmitting, remote controlled television studio on its premises.

Bradford also has Europe's only Colour Museum and the unique Reed Organ and Harmonium Museum at Sir Titus Salt's model industrial village of Saltaire, where a collection of David Hockney's work can be seen at the rapidly-expanding Salts Mill development. The Bradford Industrial Museum provides a fascinating record of the wool textile industry and there's even a display of original Sooty Show sets at 'The World and Sooty' in Shipley!

The Bradford Metropolitan District is a unification, under one administration, of a number of places which are inter-dependent in terms of housing, employment, shopping facilities and some local authority services. Unity does not mean uniformity, however, and each town and village still retains its own character and individuality, each with special needs which can now be catered for more adequately.

TOPOGRAPHY

Bury Metropolitan Borough lies broadly in the valley of the River Irwell in the shadow of that part of the Pennines known as the Forest of Rossendale and at the edge of the East Lancashire Plain, with large areas of moorland and countryside which provide facilities for relaxation for both the walker and the motorist. Areas of great natural beauty such as the Ribbles Valley and the Lake District are easy of access and the Lancashire Coast is little more than one hour's distance away by car. The Borough includes the areas of Prestwich, Radcliffe, Ramsbottom, Tottington and Whitefield.

The borough has the great asset of excellent road communications having within its boundaries the M66, a direct link to the M62 motorway which links the M6 and M1 motorways. The M62 motorway also provides a direct link to Manchester Airport which can now be reached from any part of the Borough, by road, within half an hour. In addition the Borough has a frequent train service to Manchester. A new road/rail interchange was opened in recent years. The East Lancashire Steam Railway from Bury to Rawtenstall also provides transport with a difference which has boosted the area's tourism potential in recent years.

There has been a considerable amount of attractive private housing development in the area in recent years and this, along with other factors such as excellent educational and recreational facilities, has done much to increase the attractiveness of the borough as a residential area.

The industry of the area is extremely varied and the council is anxious to encourage the further development of industry and commerce in the Borough in order to ensure the continued prosperity of the area. Land and accommodation is available in the borough for industrial and commercial development and the Economic Development Officer will be pleased to supply details.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Reorganisation of Local Government in 1974 produced an administrative blending of town and countryside already apparent in the natural structure of the Calderdale District, where stone-built industrial townships merged harmoniously with river valley and hill pasture.

Calderdale effectively has one foot in the old industrial West Riding and the other firmly planted on the moors. Its landscape is distinctive and varied, the pleasing aspects of its geographical features matched by the works of man throughout a long and interesting history.

Halifax is the largest town and site of the main Local Government Offices. Once the chief West Riding wool marketing centre and heavily dependent on the textile industry, it has since diversified into many other trades, including confectionery and machine tools. It is also the headquarters of "The Halifax", the world's biggest building society, which was founded in 1853. Buildings of historic interest abound including the unique Piece Hall where 18th century clothiers traded their wares. The building has great beauty with its multi-storey colonnades fronting on a huge courtyard and it now contains a permanent museum and art gallery, as well as crafts and antique shops and a Friday and Saturday Open Market. It is also a centre for a variety of out-door entertainments.

Brighouse, Todmorden, Sowerby Bridge, Elland and Hebden Bridge, whilst industrial in character, have in general developed a multiplicity of trades and a wide variety of activities and most have an extensive rural hinterland of outstanding scenic beauty.

Ripponden, nestling in the pleasantly wooded Ryburn Valley, has a predominantly rural character and its proximity to the M62 has also increased its attractiveness as a residential area. Heptonstall, adjacent to Hebden Bridge, is a beautifully preserved village situated on the edge of the moors and is one of the oldest settlements in Calderdale. It possesses the unusual feature of a ruined 13th century church in the same churchyard as the present Parish Church.

Hardcastle Craggs, above Hebden Bridge, and the adjacent Crimsworth Dean of some 300 acres of woodlands, forms one of the north's best known local beauty spots.

TOPOGRAPHY

Coventry, which received its original charter of incorporation in 1345, was constituted a separate county in 1451, but was rejoined to the County of Warwick in 1842. It became a county borough in 1888 and on 3rd June 1953, H.M. Queen Elizabeth II commanded that the City's Chief Magistrate should be styled Lord Mayor. On local government reorganisation, the Authority became, as from 1st April 1974, a Metropolitan District enlarged by the addition of certain areas of Warwickshire. The district was granted a Borough Charter as from the date of reorganisation; H.M. The Queen also approved the grant, with effect from the same date, of the title and dignity of City to the district and the use of the style Lord Mayor by the Chairman of the Council and the style Deputy Lord Mayor by the Vice-Chairman.

The Council House was officially opened in 1920, but St. Mary's Hall, a 14th century building, which was the municipal centre for some hundreds of years, is still used for subsidiary civic purposes. The Council controls large areas of common land and is the owner of large estates and properties, including the 280-acre Coombe Countryside Park, adjoining the eastern boundary of the City. Coventry is ideally located at the centre of the national motorway system, within easy reach of the National Exhibition Centre, the National Agricultural Centre and the tourist attractions of Warwickshire and the Cotswolds. Major new shopping development is taking place in the central precinct which will reinforce the city's role as a regional centre. Many new industries are locating within the city encouraged by the development of the University of Warwick Science Park and several high quality Business Parks. The city's attractive location within the Warwickshire Green Belt is being further enhanced by a policy of environmental improvements.

Lord Mayor's annual allowance: £10,100 (Deputy Lord Mayor: £2,670).

The district is one of considerable contrasts. At the centre is the town of Doncaster which offers excellent shopping, market and commercial services for a great deal of South Yorks., Notts. and Lincolnshire. The district also has large areas of unspoilt attractive countryside with numerous small villages of charm and character. The townships of Adwick, Askern, Bawtry, Bentley, Conisbrough, Mexborough, Thorne and Tickhill provide good local shopping.

Great 'self help' efforts have been made to attract new industries to supplement the reliance on mining, engineering and agriculture. Much has been achieved and this policy will be continued.

There is an excellent range of leisure facilities and special mention is made of the Doncaster Racecourse, owned and administered by the Council. It is one of the most up-to-date courses with a new grandstand.

There are many historical features including Mansbrough Castle and Doncaster's 18th century Mansion House.

TOPOGRAPHY

Dudley Metropolitan Borough Council was formed by the amalgamation of several smaller authorities following the local government reorganisation of 1966 and 1974. It is one of the seven West Midlands Metropolitan Districts and is located on the Western edge of the conurbation. Dudley borders green belt land to the West and South, and the open countryside of Staffordshire, Shropshire and Hereford and Worcester beyond. One of the main features of the area is Dudley Castle, which stands on a ridge in the centre of the town. Nearby is the 74 acre Wrens Nest Geological Nature Reserve, with its unique examples of Silurian Limestone.

History, tourism and industry have close ties in Dudley. The industrial heritage based on coal, limestone and iron ore workings has broadened from a 'heavy' industry base to encompass a range of more modern light and service industries. However it is still possible to see the industries of the past brought to life in the Black Country Museum—part of Dudley's major tourist attraction, Black Country World—which will be receiving more than one million visitors a year by the mid 1990s. The Borough's glass industry is internationally famous for its high quality lead crystal glassware and can be seen 'in action' by visiting one of the many local glassworks. The Broadfield House Glass Museum in Kingswinford has a superb display of the products and history of this important part of the Borough's industrial past and present.

Opportunities for industrial development are widespread. Incentives are available within Dudley's Enterprise Zones, together with a good supply of suitable land and properties in the area as a whole.

The 'greening' of Dudley has been a high priority in recent years. The Borough now boasts many parks and informal open spaces along with three designated Nature Reserves. Some of these natural areas are linked by a growing number of footpaths and cycleways, and the now quiet waters of the local canal network. There are eighteen Conservation Areas and more than 260 statutory protected buildings covering a 'history' spanning over 900 years.

Service and accessibility to the public is considered most important and has been recognized by the early establishment of District Offices offering a wide range of services at a local level.

Mayoral annual allowance: £15,000.

Gateshead metropolitan borough extends for 12.6 miles along the southern bank of the River Tyne, the largest in area of the five districts in Tyne and Wear. Its 55 square miles are a mixture of town and country, the largely urban areas of Blaydon, Dunston, Felling and Gateshead contrasting with the pleasant rural settings of Ryton and the Derwent Valley.

The Team Valley enterprise zone, home of English Estates, celebrated its first 50 years in 1986. Emphasis is placed on encouraging small businesses to develop, and a prime example is the Enterprise Workshops complex, built by English Estates and managed by Gateshead MBC. Elsewhere in the borough, a major economic development initiative has led to a decision by the Japanese firm Komatsu to base its European manufacturing plant in Birtley.

Some 6,000 new jobs have been created by the Metro Centre, a shopping and leisure complex on the outskirts of town which is one of the largest in Europe. Council support for this and other commercial schemes is helping to create much-needed jobs in the service sector.

Work is well advanced on clearing a 180-acre site for the 1990 National Garden Festival, a £38m project which is expected to attract over 3m visitors and will provide a new area of parkland in the heart of the borough.

In early 1987 the council moved to new, purpose-built headquarters in central Gateshead. The Civic Centre, which houses most council departments, provides ready access and an improved service to the public.

Gateshead has an international reputation as a centre of sporting excellence and the council owned International Stadium is well established as a venue for national and international athletics meetings.

Mayoral annual allowance: £7,500.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Metropolitan Borough of Kirklees is one of five districts in West Yorkshire. The name "Kirklees"—meaning "Church Meadow"—is taken from the ruined Kirklees Priory north of Huddersfield where Robin Hood is reputed to be buried. Kirklees includes some of the best-known industrial and commercial centres in the United Kingdom, including Huddersfield, Dewsbury and Batley, and the area stretches from the high moorlands of the Pennines around Marsden and Holmfirth to the edge of Bradford, Leeds and Wakefield.

Kirklees is a district of great contrasts, including busy commercial and industrial centres and large, areas of open countryside.

Communications in Kirklees are excellent. The M62 motorway runs along the northern boundary of the district and the M1 is close to the east. There is easy access to the countrywide motorway network and the area is well served by rail.

Kirklees Council's positive approach towards encouraging investment, stimulating economic growth, increasing employment and improving people's lifestyle is essentially one of partnership.

A rolling programme of partnership projects involves the Council, Government, EEC and the private sector. The Council also provides help and assistance to promote and encourage industrial development.

Employment in Kirklees is traditionally biased towards manufacturing industries, particularly textiles. However, other types of manufacturing now provide a large percentage of jobs in the mechanical and electrical engineering, chemical, tractor manufacturing, and food and drink industries. Kirklees also has a wide range of professional, banking and other service jobs.

New firms attracted to the area find that, with such a wide range of manufacturing and service industries in Kirklees, many of the contacts and supplies they need are available locally. The area also has a good industrial relations record and readily-available skilled workforce, and these are major attractions.

The Council is firmly committed to the promotion of tourism. The area has many tourist attractions. There are strong Bronte connections in the Heavy Woollen Area—Oakwell Hall at Birstall and Red House Museum at Gomersal; and Holmfirth and the Holme Valley—made famous by the BBC TV series "Last of the Summer Wine"—attract many visitors. The area also includes part of the Peak District National Park.

Sports centres and swimming pools are available in most parts and the musical tradition from choral to brass bands is very strong.

Education is given high priority from the high academic level of Huddersfield Polytechnic through the various colleges of technology and arts; secondary schools down to play groups.

The image of the grimy north has been dispelled by the cleaning of hundreds of buildings, and reclamation and landscaping of waste and disused land, coupled with a smoke-free atmosphere. The industrialist and tourist is certain to find Kirklees an attractive place to live and work: the natural beauty of the countryside complementing towns and villages of individuality and character.

TOPOGRAPHY

Knowsley which lies to the East of Liverpool, consists of the major townships of Kirkby, Huyton, Prescot, Whiston and Halewood. Although it is recognised as the economic centre of Merseyside, two thirds of its 37½ square mile area is designated green belt.

The Borough takes its name from one of the smallest villages in the area which, in turn, takes its name from the famous Knowsley Hall, home of the Stanley family; Earls of Derby. The first Earl snatched the King's crown at the battle of Bosworth Field in 1485 and placed it on the head of Henry VII—Henry Tudor, and entertained the King at Knowsley Hall for a month after the battle. Knowsley Hall stands in 2000 acres of private parkland which also contains the 360 acre Safari Park. Lions, cheetahs, elephants and other African fauna now wander freely over land on which Elizabeth I and William Shakespeare once strolled.

Although history and the conservation of beauty play an important part in the life of the Borough, industrial and commercial development are the cornerstone of the area's economic development. Two of Europe's largest industrial parks are located in Knowsley and it is from here that companies large and small export manufactured goods to the world.

The Freeport at Seaforth, linked to the Borough by the M57 motorway, is fifteen minutes driving distance from the centre of the industrial parks, and Liverpool Airport is the same distance.

Each of the Borough's town centres has modern shops which cater for every need and the newly completed Prescot Town Centre Redevelopment has added a new dimension to a pleasant shopping experience.

Knowsley is famous for its sporting and leisure facilities too and three of the Borough's leisure centres have been declared 'Centres of Sporting Excellence' by the Sports Council. The Council is currently active in supporting the North West's bid to stage the Olympic Games in 1996 and recently organised the Six Nations Cycle Event at Kirkby Sports Centre which was sponsored by several local companies.

Sporting, cultural and industrial interests combine to produce a well balanced Borough which provides excellent conference facilities at several modern suites, is served by the national motorway system and has one of the world's finest collections of clocks and watches housed in the famous Prescot Clock and Watch Making Museum.

TOPOGRAPHY

Leeds is the largest settlement within West Yorkshire and the second largest district in England. It is located about half-way between London and Edinburgh and exactly equidistant from the east and west coasts (64 miles). Its central location is a key position for trade and manufacturing and has led to the City becoming a major commercial, industrial, administrative and cultural centre and a focal point for road and rail communications. On the southern edge of the Metropolitan District the London—Leeds M1 Motorway intersects with the Lancashire—Yorkshire (M62) Motorway. Within the District are regional offices of government, the head-quarters of industrial firms and finance houses and extensive medical and professional facilities. Leeds regional influence is reflected in the concentration in or near the central area of a University, a Polytechnic, TV studios, radio stations, morning and evening newspapers and several department stores.

The City's accessibility, size and varied functions ensure its status as one of the main provincial centres of England.

TOPOGRAPHY

The title of "City" was first conferred upon Liverpool by Royal Charter in May 1880, but as a town Liverpool dates back to August 1207 when King John signed Letters Patent proclaiming Liverpool to be a borough and a Port in order to encourage settlers into the area.

Famous as one of the world's most important ports, there is a wide diversity of industry and commerce within the City's boundaries. The great wealth earned by the City's merchants and shipowners is reflected in many fine buildings—the 18th Century Town Hall, the Bluecoat Chambers, the Walker Art Gallery, the Liverpool Museum, St. George's Hall, the Royal Liver Building on the City's famous waterfront and Speke Hall, an Elizabethan Manor House situated a few miles from the City Centre. The City's two Cathedrals are also outstanding architectural examples. More recently the revitalised Albert Dock Area, including the Maritime Museum has been added to Liverpool's list of impressive attractions.

The City has been dubbed the "Football Mecca of Europe" with both clubs—Liverpool and Everton enjoying major successes over the last 20 years. Liverpool also boasts a significant musical heritage with groups such as the Beatles, the Spinners and more recent groups such as Frankie Goes to Hollywood carrying on the tradition.

The City also has excellent communications—two Mersey Tunnels, motorway and rail links with London and other principal Cities, and a major airport at Speke within the City area.

TOPOGRAPHY

Manchester is situated at the confluence of the Rivers Irk, Medlock and Irwell and is bounded by the lower Pennine Hills on the north and east and by the fertile Cheshire Plain to the south. The city is 133 feet above sea level.

Following local government reorganisation in 1974, the city boundaries were largely unchanged, although the borough of Ringway was included within the city, thus bringing within one local authority boundary the whole of Manchester International Airport. The Chief executive acts as secretary to the Manchester Airport PLC Board, and clerk to the Greater Manchester Passenger Transport Authority. The Council appoints the majority of the directors of the Manchester Ship Canal Company, which administers the Port of Manchester.

Mayoral annual allowance: £10,200.

TOPOGRAPHY

The City of Newcastle upon Tyne is more than an important industrial and commercial centre. It is an ancient and historic city, and the gateway to Northumberland, one of England's most beautiful counties.

By whichever bridge the visitor approaches the City from the south, he will see the 12th century Keep and the graceful lantern-tower of the Cathedral. There are many interesting buildings, some almost as old as the City itself, some new. New central development has made Newcastle one of the finest provincial cities, combining the most modern ideas in planning, whilst retaining the best of the city's architectural heritage. There are few streets in England which can match the graceful sweep of Grey Street up past the impressive portico of the Theatre Royal to the Grey Monument, the focal point of the 19th century Grainger-Dobson town plan.

Extensive development at the North end of the Tyne Bridge illustrates the merging of the old city with the new. The historic Quayside is witnessing an explosion of activity and is once again becoming the focus of attention for private developers and industrialists. A number of key developments are under way including housing, leisure, hotel projects and a business park.

Near the river, in addition to the Castle and Cathedral, there are several interesting buildings, including the Guildhall. To the north of the City the new buildings of the University of Newcastle dominate the skyline. Near them is the Civic Centre, which won a Civic Trust award for architecture, and the buildings of the Newcastle Polytechnic, contained in the Education Precinct.

As well as being the regional capital, Newcastle is the shopping centre of Tyneside, a conurbation of nearly a million people. The visitor will find an extensive range of shops, large department stores, extensive covered markets and Eldon Square, one of the largest covered shopping centres in Europe.

TOPOGRAPHY

Situated on the north side of the River Tyne estuary in the county of Tyne and Wear, the Borough is of some antiquity, including in its boundaries the eastern extremity of Hadrian's Wall, the Tynemouth Priory, and Pen Bal Crag at the river mouth. As part of the unbroken conurbation of Tyneside the Borough has wide and varied characteristics, embracing shipbuilding and ship repairing in Wallsend, the fishing industry at North Shields, and the popular seaside and health resorts with extensive sands and havens at Whitley Bay and Tynemouth. With modern, up-to-date road, rail, air and sea communications the basic heavy industries have been supplemented by the development of industrial trading estates where light industries have brought further employment to the area, including the New Town of Killingworth, creating a balanced and varied economy. The Borough is a dormitory area for Newcastle and, in addition to new, modern housing estate development, provides a wide variety of services and amenities, including parks, playing fields, swimming baths, sports centres, as well as libraries and study centres for further education.

TOPOGRAPHY

Oldham is a district of many contrasts. It is a busy industrial area set amidst a landscape of outstanding natural beauty. Of the total area of the Borough, which is more than 55 square miles, two thirds is open land, much of it wide areas of countryside, slender valleys, rushing streams and windblown moorland.

Historically, Oldham was one of the first centres of the Industrial Revolution. Cotton spinning and weaving became the main industries during the nineteenth century but these have given way during the last fifty years to a wide range of industries from vehicle-building to electronics, from textile machinery to boat-building. Oldham's links with the famous are many—William Cobbett and Sir Winston Churchill were Oldham MP's; Annie Kenney, a famous suffragette, and Sir William Walton, the composer, were born locally, and these are just a few of Oldham's famous sons and daughters.

As a centre for living and working, the Oldham area is both convenient and attractive. Manchester lies seven miles to the south-west and yet the Pennine Way is only six miles north-east.

Undoubtedly one of the main attractions of Oldham is that it offers a unique combination, due to its location, of town and city centre cultural and entertainment facilities. The Borough is very well situated for communications with the rest of the country. Situated immediately south of the M62 motorway, travel to Merseyside, Hull, Glasgow, Tyneside, Teesside, West Midlands, Bristol, London and the South-east is simple. Excellent bus and rail links and the proximity of Manchester Ringway Airport all contribute to the ease of travelling. For the tourist this area offers some of the most spectacular scenery that England can offer, as well as being within easy reach of seaside resorts, the Peak District National Park, the Lake District and the Lancashire, Cheshire and Welsh countryside.

Oldham is the centre of an area noted for shopping variety. Its position as a shopping-centre is two-fold; it has an old-established outdoor market (Tommyfield) and is in the process of re-building its town centre with modern shops and stores. The nearby districts of Chadderton, Royton and Failsworth have new shopping centres and the surrounding towns, especially Manchester, have every kind of store for the shopper. Parking facilities are available throughout the area and there are ample car parks serving the main shopping centre.

A full range of recreational and sports activities is offered Boroughwide, catering for almost every hobby and interest. Over twenty-five major parks are available and numerous smaller parks and gardens are found everywhere. A number of the parks have boating lakes and full facilities for children. The area has also five golf courses, whose variety will test the most discriminating golfer. Other sports popular in this area include Rugby League, Football, Cricket and Crown Green Bowling. Oldham Athletic, the Borough's major Football team, is known throughout the country.

Oldham has a superb modern combined sports centre and swimming stadium in the town centre and other pools in various parts of the Borough. The Oldham Coliseum Theatre and the Grange Arts Centre between them provide a comprehensive range of entertainment, from concerts, exhibitions and shows to impressive amateur and professional dramatic productions. The Borough is a leading centre for brass band concerts. Oldham's Local Interest Centre in combination with the Local Studies Library provides a cultural focal point for the Borough by giving all kinds of information, both current and historical, about the area. Other places of interest include Foxdenton Hall, Chadderton, a brick-built manor house in the classic renaissance style dating from about 1700; St. Mary's Parish Church, an attractive example of early nineteenth-century architecture and the Old Town Hall, a neo-classic building built between 1841–1842. The Art Gallery in Union Street contains a comprehensive range of paintings, sculpture and objet d'art. The Blue Coat School is housed in an imposing building high above the town.

The impressive new Civic Centre on West St. has enabled the majority of Local Authority departments to be accommodated in a single building. This is a civic centre in the full sense, it also includes a 1,200 seater multi-purpose assembly hall as well as full banqueting and other facilities. The new Civic Centre completes a civic and administration complex consisting of the College of Technology, Divisional Police Headquarters and the new Magistrates Courts.

A friendly link with the continent is maintained through twin towns, Kranj, in Yugoslavia, twins with the Metropolitan Borough, Landsberg in Germany with Failsworth, and Geesthacht, again in Germany, with Chadderton. Exchange visits are made and this developing friendship is a small but important contribution towards international relationships.

Mayoral annual allowance: £7,500.

TOPOGRAPHY

Rotherham is located at the heart of the coal and steel districts of South Yorkshire. A wide variety of light industry has been attracted to the area, yet parts still remain predominantly rural in character. Road and rail communications with the rest of the country are first class. It is a centre from which some of the finest countryside can be reached. The Peak District and the Dukeries lie nearby and the dales and moors of West and North Yorkshire are only a short drive away. Rotherham has plenty of its own facilities, too, for cultural and physical recreation.

The Metropolitan Borough covers an area of some 110 square miles. The main urban centre is Rotherham but there are substantial population groups based on Anston, Aston, Dinnington, Kiveton Park, Maltby, Rawmarsh, Swinton and Wath-upon-Dearne. There are also several smaller but identifiable communities of varying size, some suburban in character and others of a more isolated, rural nature. Most of these towns and villages act, to some extent, as dormitories for Sheffield, Barnsley, Doncaster and Worksop, as well as for Rotherham.

Mayoral annual allowance: £5,450.

Salford is situated in the south-west of the Greater Manchester area. It plays many roles and may be said to be the epitome of Lancashire life. The scene shifts gradually from the pastoral beauty of Worsley to the busy, industrial complexes of the area around Manchester Docks. The area is rich in places of interest. The Peel Park Museum and Art Gallery houses the largest public collection of Lowry paintings and a street scene showing relics from the nineteenth century; Monks Hall Museum has examples of machine tools and a steam hammer from the Industrial Revolution made by James Nasmyth, the famous engineer; the banks of the Bridgewater Canal in Worsley are lined with beautiful timbered buildings of which the court house and Worsley Old Hall are notable, the latter containing a restaurant in which a Jacobean banquet can be enjoyed; the award-winning Queensmere reclamation scheme, in which five acres of near derelict land were transformed into a pleasant recreational area, can be seen in Swinton; in the heart of Salford can be found the recently renovated Ordsall Hall, a half-timbered fourteenth-century building which in the past was the home of one of Lancashire's oldest families, the Radcliffes; Eccles Parish Church dates from the thirteenth century and is said to be on a site consecrated by St. Patrick in early Christian times. Salford is renowned for its pioneering attitude, evidence of which can be seen in the Salford Science Park Council, the siting in Salford of the Greater Manchester Microsystem Centre, the pioneering spirit of the University and College of Technology. The exciting Salford Quay Redevelopment Programme is remodelling the former docks creating new development opportunities. Already constructed are a 4-star Hotel, a multiplex cinema, 112 Houses and a Business Park, Waterfront 2,000. Further developments are also underway.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough is urban in character, highly industrialised, and includes the districts of Oldbury, Rowley Regis, Smethwick, Tipton, Wednesbury, and West Bromwich. The origins of these districts can be traced back to the twelfth century and in some cases even earlier, beginning as scattered villages and growing into towns with industrialisation in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. A network of main roads now connects Sandwell's constituent parts, but more significant to it, as one of the most important industrial centres of the West Midlands, is the fact that it lies at the heart of the Motorway network where the M5 and M6 meet. The Borough is probably unique in having within its area four motorway intersection points. The new Sandwell and Dudley Inter-City railway station at Oldbury, which opened in May 1984, provides direct rail travel to London and the North-West.

Mayoral annual allowance: £12,000 plus £19.50 attendance allowance.

TOPOGRAPHY

The City of Sheffield is the largest urban area in the county of South Yorkshire. It is one of the world's most famous centres for cutlery and steel production. Once its reputation rested solely on that achievement. Today it enjoys a newly acquired renown for its post war development as a conference and tourist centre, a regional office and shopping centre, bold architectural developments and environmental pollution control success.

Sheffield's 13-year Clean Air programme from 1959-1972 is one of Britain's largest and most prestigious ecological achievements. Because of it, Sheffield became the first entirely smokeless city in Britain and claims to be the cleanest industrial city in Europe. This began Sheffield's development into conferences and tourism. The south-western boundaries lie within part of the Peak District National Park, and access is conveniently simple.

To cater for this growth area, Sheffield has developed new hotels and leisure and shopping amenities. Expansion points to future similar building. Sheffield now stands seventh in the 'league table' of the British Association of Conference Towns handling 2 million visitors a year.

Sheffield has an excellent record of public housebuilding, providing almost 100,000 Council homes throughout the City. The design problems posed by its characteristically hilly terrain have been resolved in some attractive and interesting developments such as the one at Gleadless Valley. Sheffield has also pursued a vigorous improvement policy for its older housing stock through continuing estate modernisation and (in the private sector) the declaration of Improvement Areas".

A surprising feature for such a traditionally industrial conurbation is the wealth of public open space in the city - more than any other industrial area of Britain. A popular attraction is the 10 mile 'Round Walk', a continuous route through park and country inside the city's southern boundary.

The Museums' department maintains five museums. The City Museum, Weston Park, has specialised collections of cutlery, and Old Sheffield Plate; local archaeology including the Bateman collection and the unique Saxon helmet from Benty Grange, and displays of local wildlife. Bishops' House is a timber-framed Tudor yeoman's house with period rooms and exhibitions of local and social history. The three industrial museums are the Abbeydale Industrial Hamlet, a restored 18th century scythe works with crucible steel melting shop; Shepherd Wheel, a typical grinders "hull", and Kelham Island, a brand-new concept in museums, where traditional Sheffield "Little Mesters" work—as does the giant 12,000 h.p. River Don steam engine.

TOPOGRAPHY

The borough of South Tyneside is situated, as its name implies, on the south bank of the River Tyne at its mouth. It is an important seaport, occupying a prominent place in the industrial life not only of Tyneside but of the North East.

The traditional heavy industries of the district have been supplemented in recent years by the establishment of many new light industries on recently developed Industrial Estates.

Formed by the amalgamation of South Shields, Jarrow, Hebburn and Boldon, the Borough has inherited a history dating back to the second century, when there existed at the mouth of the River Tyne a Roman Fort, the remains of which can still be seen today including a reconstructed gateway. Further up river, at Jarrow, can be found the Church of St. Paul which is on the site of a monastery in which the Venerable Bede lived and worked during the late seventh and early eighth centuries, spreading his knowledge to students from all over Europe.

South Shields was the home of the inventor of the lifeboat, William Wouldhave, who designed it, following a number of shipwrecks on the Herd Sands, in 1789 and saw it launched in 1790.

In recent years South Tyneside has turned to tourism and it is marketed as Catherine Cookson Country. It is the area where the famous writer was born and brought up, and where many of her best sellers were set. There is also 200 acres of coastal grassland owned by the National Trust, three fine beaches, some excellent parks and a Leisure and Gymnastic Centre.

Mayoral annual allowance: £4,080.

TOPOGRAPHY

Situated in the south east corner of the Greater Manchester County, the Metropolitan Borough of Stockport is ideally placed between the industrial and commercial centres of the region and the unspoiled beauty of Derbyshire and Cheshire.

A thriving community of almost 300,000 people, it is at the nexus of a national and international communications network. The national motorway system runs into the borough at Cheadle, all trains on the 2½ hour Inter City Manchester—London line call at Stockport, Manchester International Airport is just eight minutes drive from the town centre, and the Port of Manchester is just 20 minutes away. There is easy access to the M63 which runs through the town centre, and beneath the floodlit Railway Viaduct—the largest brick structure in Europe.

Once a cotton area, it has adapted well to the technological revolution and electronics, plastics, engineering, printing and foodstuffs have now gained a firm foothold in the borough's industrial estates. Stockport is also the second largest office employer in the county, and many firms have established regional offices here.

Despite this healthy industrial and commercial portfolio, there is no lack of green fields and open spaces. One quarter of Stockport's 31,000 acres is green belt. It has a country park, and a farm interpretive centre. The three main river valleys—Tame, Mersey and Etherow—Goyt, are now largely re-shaped as informal outdoor leisure areas. The Borough also maintains for public enjoyment 1,300 acres of wild moorland, a stately home and its upland park and deer-herds at Lyme Park. Lyme Hall contains rare tapestries, fine wood carvings and the Sir Francis Legh collection of antique English Clocks. This is in the Peak National Park just outside the administrative boundary.

Stockport is also well provided with sporting and recreational facilities, and has the widest spectrum of recreation facilities in the region.

It is reckoned to have the best overall range of quality housing stock in the region, and it has a reputation amongst shoppers from miles around for the keen prices and unusual bargains to be found on the stalls of its 700 year old market and for the thriving, modern Merseyway Precinct.

Mayoral annual allowance: £7,010.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough of Sunderland is the largest urban centre in the Northern Region. It includes Washington New Town, the most dynamic growth centre in the North, as well as the former Urban Districts of Houghton le Spring and Hetton le Hole. The New Town has generated an air of success and enterprise which has been instrumental in ensuring over the past decade that the workforce and population of Sunderland has grown and stabilised in direct contrast to neighbouring metropolitan authorities.

The Borough's origins as a series of small settlements along the lower reaches of the River Wear were based on its role as a centre of worship for early Christians, and, later, on the development of fishing and agriculture.

From the seventeenth century onwards, the Borough's prosperity was closely linked to the development of Durham Coalfield. As the coal trade grew, so did the network of railways, wagonways and harbour facilities. Industries developed on a large scale along the river—above all, shipbuilding. Nineteenth century Sunderland claimed to be the world's largest shipbuilding town.

Today apart from one high productivity 'Super-Pit' extending miles under the North Sea these traditional industries have all but disappeared.

A host of new light industrial and service activities now dominate the local economy, with hundreds of thriving small and large firms, and a wide range of famous names, including Nissan, Rolls Royce, Corning (Pyrex), Nike, Dewhirst, Vaux, Grove-Coles and Philips. The recent designation of the UK's latest enterprise zone in Sunderland is sure to add new names to the list. Sadly, the remarkable growth of these industries, many having been attracted to the town from the USA, the Far East and Scandinavia, has not yet been sufficient to compensate fully for the decline of the traditional base. Unemployment is still a serious problem.

Nowhere is the changing character of the Borough better illustrated than in its municipally owned Port and in its Town Centre. Sunderland's international maritime connections were, until relatively recently, based largely upon its coal trade. Today, the Port offers a unique rivermouth base for offshore oil exploration and supply, provides the North's only deep water, non-dedicated specialised container-handling facility and is developing into a major forest products terminal. Town Centre shopping, meanwhile, has been dramatically improved by the complete refurbishment and covering in of the giant open precinct constructed during the 1960's. The "Bridges" scheme is the largest of its type ever undertaken in the UK.

With such varied origins, it is hardly surprising that the Borough has been able to preserve a rich historical and cultural heritage. The monastery of St. Peter's, still in use as a parish church, was where the Venerable Bede spent his early years. There are the well preserved remains of the 15th Century Hylton Castle and the ancestral home of the USA's first president at Washington Old Hall. The Penshaw Monument, a reproduction of a Greek temple, dominates the western skyline. It was built in 1844, to honour the first Earl of Durham.

Relics of Sunderland's more recent past are also well preserved, including the Ryhope Pumping Station (1868), the near perfect Monkwearmouth Station (1848), the Fulwell Mill (1821) and the Bowes Railway (1826).

Many of the scars of past industrialisation have now been eradicated and the Town's environment is being dramatically transformed, a process in which the Tyne and Wear Development Corporation is now playing a major part. The coast and the riverside, complementing the many parks and open spaces throughout the Borough, have once again, following massive and imaginative reclamation, become places to enjoy. At Silksworth, for example, a former colliery site extending over 71 ha, a vast open air recreational complex has been created, with a dry ski slope, all weather artificial playing surfaces and tracks, boating and fishing lakes and an extensive range of other facilities, including the prestigious Puma Indoor Tennis Centre.

Roker and Seaburn offer over 2 miles of the best beaches in an area renowned for its coastal scenery. Illuminations are held in late summer and autumn and in 1989 attracted over 4 million visitors. The multi-million pound leisure complex recently opened at Seaburn has greatly enhanced the resorts appeal. Seaburn also hosts the town east's only air show, watched in 1989 by over 250,000 people. In the area around the Port the location for a new marina and leisure centre, angling is a popular activity, yachting and windsurfing are major pastimes and there is a small but busy fish quay used by the local inshore fleet.

Inland, pleasant riverside walkways and parks have been created and at Washington the Wildfowl Park with 200 species and the North of England Aircraft Museum offer contrasting but well patronised recreation for both visitor and resident.

The Crowtree Leisure Centre in the centre of the town is one of Britain's largest, used by over 1.5 million people every year. It incorporates a swimming pool (with wave machine and aquaslide), an ice rink and facilities for an almost infinite range of indoor sports. Washington offers a similarly extensive range of facilities at the Galleries Leisure Centre and the Northumbria Centre, seating 3000 people and is the focus of the annual Festival of the Air, attracting spectacular kites and their fliers from all over the world. There are a large number of smaller centres at various locations throughout the town. There are two Arts Centres, sixteen libraries, several museums, five cinema screens and almost two thousand clubs and organisations catering for every conceivable interest.

The Empire Theatre, again municipally owned, hosts throughout the year an immensely well patronized programme varying from pantomime and drama to opera, ballet and one-night shows by leading performers. The theatre, now fully refurbished, has recently been designated by Northern Arts as the region's principal venue for national and international touring performances of opera, ballet and symphonic music and is set to become the north's premier entertainment venue in the 1990's. The Royalty Theatre offers amateur dramatic performances of the highest standard.

TOPOGRAPHY

Situated in the south-west of the Greater Manchester conurbation, Trafford contains an interesting range of differing urban and rural environments. Ease of communication is one of its principal assets. Manchester International Airport, via the M63 and M56 Motorways is within a very short distance, whilst Liverpool (Speke) Airport can be reached quite easily by the M63 and M62 Motorways. The M63 motorway running through the borough gives immediate access to the national network, and the Manchester Ship Canal forms the western boundary of the Borough. The port of Liverpool within sixty minutes' driving time. Major sources of employment exist in the industrial complexes and in the Enterprise Zones of Trafford Park. Also Carrington and Broadheath (Altrincham). Four main and numerous subsidiary centres provide a wide variety of shopping facilities, together with many new office developments. Pleasant residential areas in all parts of the borough are linked to the city centre by good roads and fast and frequent train services. Old Trafford contains the grounds of the Lancashire County Cricket Club and Manchester United Football Club; Dunham Park (seat of the late Earl of Stamford) with its fallow deer and 16th century deer barn, the Bollin and Mersey Valleys and the Bridgewater Canal all offer many opportunities for recreation.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Wakefield Metropolitan District has the advantage of excellent communications. The M1 passes through the western side of the District, the A1 keeps close company with the eastern boundary, and the M62 joins these two major roads along the northern edge of the District. Air communications are provided at the nearby Leeds/Bradford and Manchester Airports.

The District is also well placed on the main rail network with hourly inter-city trains to London, and a direct commercial canal outlet to the Humber Ports is provided by the Aire and Calder Navigation.

The traditional industry is coal mining and although the development of the new Selby coal-field and the demise of many pits has led to a reduction in the numbers employed in the mining industry, the existence within the District of several 'long-life' pits into which the Coal Board has invested heavily, has ensured the continuance of mining as a major industry.

Wakefield is also well known as a centre of a variety of traditional industries including glass making and textiles (especially the production of knitting wools and high class garments). Today, in addition to being a recognised administrative centre housing various regional organisations it is rapidly attracting a number of new services and industries, several of which are in the high technology classification.

To meet the needs of a growing economy, the District Council have pressed ahead with the development of shopping schemes including City Centre projects involving attractive shopping malls.

The District College provides educational back-up for industry and commerce as well as providing courses for sixth formers and adults.

Leisure facilities have not been neglected by the Council, and new sports centres have been built and country parks created to supplement the leisure opportunities already in existence.

Notwithstanding the importance of the industrial urban areas, a predominant proportion of the District remains as open and attractive countryside, possessing many varied features of historical and environmental interest.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough is an area of contrasts. The western part of the Borough, to the west of the M6, is made up of the older Black Country towns of Willenhall and Darlaston. The east of the Borough is more residential, and, in parts, agricultural in character. Walsall itself has a thriving and expanding shopping centre, and its market, famous throughout the midlands, is held four times a week in the Square and on Church Hill.

There is a wide range of traditional and new industries, spread throughout the Borough. Willenhall remains the centre of the British lock making industry, and Walsall a major centre for the leather work and saddlery. A new Leather Centre opened in April 1988.

Within walking distance of Walsall Town Centre is the tranquil Arboretum, where each Autumn illuminations are held which attract a quarter of a million people, whilst on the Borough's northern edge lies Chasewater. The Central Museum and Art Gallery in Lichfield Street contains works by Epstein, Rembrandt and Constable, all part of the Garman Ryan collection of fine art. A museum devoted to Walsall born Jerome K. Jerome is situated in Bradford Street.

The Borough benefits from its position at the crossroads of the national motorway network, and road communications are being improved further by the construction of the Black Country Route, and the proposed Black Country Spine Road and North Orbital Route. Walsall is within easy reach of Birmingham Airport and the National Exhibition Centre, and frequent trains from Walsall to Birmingham link the Borough to the Inner City network.

Walsall lies conveniently close to Birmingham, with its business, shopping, entertainment and cultural facilities, yet just as close to the countryside of Shropshire and Cannock Chase, and the city of Lichfield.

Mayoral annual allowance: £9,050.

Deputy Mayoral annual allowance: £2,362.50.

TOPOGRAPHY

Metropolitan Wigan . . . a Borough with a rich heritage, now moving confidently into the next decade. It's an area where the best northern traditions of neighbourliness and a warm welcome die hard, yet where the old myths of industrial drabness have finally been scotched.

The Borough lies midway between Liverpool and Manchester, covering an area of 77 square miles. It was born out of the major upheaval in Local Government in 1974 which brought together a number of friendly industrial and rural communities grouped round the two larger towns of Wigan and Leigh, and forms the most westerly part of the County of Greater Manchester. With over 300,000 residents metropolitan Wigan is the most populous district in the County after Manchester.

There are many outward signs of the Borough's new confidence: important town centre shopping developments in Wigan and Leigh, major new road construction, and best known of all, the transformation of the Wigan Pier area from a derelict eyesore into one of the country's most exciting tourist attractions. With its heritage centre featuring professional actors, its canal water buses and display of working industrial machinery, the Pier now draws over ½ million visitors a year.

Wigan's wealth was built on coal and cotton, and though they are still part of the local economy, there has been an influx of new industries of all sorts. Major companies include Heinz, Volex, Dobson Park, Ingersoll Rand and PPG Glass Fibres, while micro electronics, paper and textile products, engineering and printing firms are all well-represented. The Borough lies in the centre of an unrivalled motorway network—M6, M61 and M62—and has the added bonus of Development Area status.

WIGAN Borough (Greater Manchester)

Elections are by thirds.

Pop., 309,600; NDRV, £79,211,124; Community Charge, £347.60; Debt, £258,000,000; Area, 19,894 hectares.

At the same time the scars of the industrial past are being eradicated. Over 2000 acres of land have been reclaimed for new uses, and it's a source of constant surprise to visitors that this Borough can boast some very attractive countryside, with a unique range of wetland habitats for wildlife.

Housing in the Borough is plentiful and relatively inexpensive, ranging from substantial town houses to attractive new properties in semi-rural surrounds. Education, too, is first class; the Wigan Education Authority has long been recognised as one of the most progressive in the Country.

For leisure enthusiasts, the choice is wide and ever-growing. There is a wealth of welcoming town and country pubs plus some excellent hotels. Wigan was in the forefront of the canal era, and the Leeds-Liverpool canal now links three delightful country parks, at Haigh, Leigh and the Three Sisters, Ashton-in-Makerfield, providing some fine walks and a haven for nature lovers. Well equipped sports centres and swimming pools, like the new Puma athletics and tennis complex and the international baths at Wigan, attract visitors from miles around; whilst in this heartland of rugby league national success is never far away.

Metropolitan Wigan is changing... for the better certainly, but never losing sight of its best traditions.

TOPOGRAPHY

Wirral district is situated on the Wirral Peninsula which is bounded by the River Mersey, the Irish Sea and the River Dee.

The area is an ideal blend of town, country and seaside, with a balanced industrial, maritime, agricultural and residential structure. A good labour market coupled with the excellent sites available offers a high potential for industrial and commercial expansion.

Whilst urban, industrial and commercial development is largely concentrated on the Mersey side of the peninsula, a considerable part of the area contains country parks, National Trust and rich farm lands interspersed with pleasant small towns and attractive villages. At the northern end of the peninsula, facing the Irish Sea, are the popular resorts of Hoylake and New Brighton; Deeside, with its sailing clubs and other amenities and peaceful, wide, tidal river overlooked by the Welsh Hills, provides a sharp contrast to the commercial bustle of the Mersey.

A good road network, including the M53 motorway running down the spine of the Wirral and two road tunnels under the Mersey to Liverpool, provides the motorist with an ease of access not only within the area but also to North Wales, the Lake District, the Peak District and the Yorkshire Dales. A diesel and electric rail service connects most parts of Wirral with Liverpool (by rail tunnel under the Mersey) and its inter city rail service and airport, whilst the Mersey ferries provide a convenient and pleasant service between Wallasey Birkenhead and Liverpool.

Shopping facilities range from the larger centres in Birkenhead and Wallasey to more modest provision in the smaller towns and villages. There are excellent educational facilities, ranging from nursery schools to all aspects of further education; there is also a number of independent schools. Amenities within the area cater for all indoor and outdoor leisure pursuits and there is a wide range of residential property.

Deputy mayoral personal allowance: £1,096.

TOPOGRAPHY

Wolverhampton is one of the principal manufacturing centres of the West Midlands, where industry and countryside meet. To the south-east is the industrial Black Country, while to the west, north and south lies beautiful countryside—Shropshire and Wales, agricultural Worcestershire and Staffordshire.

The town centre has been transformed in recent years by the building of two large traffic-free shopping precincts, and the pedestrianization of some of the main shopping streets.

On the cultural front, Wolverhampton possesses three museums and two art galleries, a cinema, a theatre, a media centre, and the versatile civic hall and a fine network of libraries. On the sporting front, too, facilities are wide and various.

DISTRICT COUNCILS IN ENGLAND

The Local Government Act 1972 abolished with effect from 1st April 1974 the

- 83 County borough councils
- 259 Non-county borough councils
- 522 Urban district councils
- 468 Rural district councils in England and Wales and replaced them by two types of district councils, viz. metropolitan and non-metropolitan, as follows:

Elections

Elections are normally held on the first Thursday in May each year, except in those years when County Council elections are held; the next county council elections are in 1993.

In Non-Metropolitan Districts, councillors are also elected for a term of four years but the individual District Councils have a choice of procedure of a whole council election every four years or elections by thirds. The Secretary of State for the Environment may, if requested, vary the election system adopted by a non-metropolitan council but not more than once in ten years. The next whole council election will be in 1991, and the one-third elections in 1991, 1992 and 1994.

In England 178 non-Metropolitan District Councils have chosen whole council elections, and 118 elections by thirds.

REGISTRATION OF BIRTHS, DEATHS AND MARRIAGES

In the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys, the Director and Registrar General controls the local registration service in England and Wales in the exercise of the registration and marriage duties in accordance with the Births and Deaths Registration Act 1953, the Registration Service Act 1953, the Marriage Acts 1949 to 1970, the Children Act 1975 and other relevant enactments.

There are 421 registration districts in England and Wales and the Superintendent Registrars act within the framework of the non-metropolitan county councils, the metropolitan district councils and the London Borough Councils. Their districts are not, however, always conterminous with present local authority boundaries and a district council area may spread into more than one registration district (RD) or a number of district councils be contained in one registration district. The thirty-seven registration areas in Greater London are listed in Section 36, and the 46 registration areas in Metropolitan Districts in Section 37.

The detailed list below indicates this spread of area responsibility by quoting the office address of each superintendent registrar operating within the boundaries of the respective local authorities.

In Scotland the registration districts are conterminous within the boundaries of the nine regional councils and the three islands councils. (Further information on the General Register Office of Births, Deaths and Marriages (Scotland) appears in Section 37.)

Note: * Indicates an authority which has part of its own area policed by the Metropolitan Police and the rest by the County force, resulting in two levels of precept.

The above tables were assembled with difficulty, from information provided by local authorities and from Govt. statistics. The latter include an average of Parish Council charges. The figure after the name of each authority is the assumed Parish Council average and, for comparative purposes, should be added to the Personal Community charge. Where no such figure appears the information shown already includes a Parish Council average.

Notes:

The population figures are the Registrar-General's mid-1989 estimates. Non-Domestic Rateable Value and Debt are as at the 1st April, 1990. Community Charge is in respect of the year 1990-91. Some authorities have included an average for Parish Councils, some have not. The figure should be checked against the financial tables on pages 234-240.

TOPOGRAPHY

The name Allerdale derives from the early 12th century with the creation of the Barony of Allerdale.

The district is bounded by the Lake District mountains and the Solway Firth. It includes mountains and sparsely populated fells; hill farms on marginal land and intensive dairy farming on the Solway Plain; and a more populous western coastal belt in which the old heavy industries of steel and coal are rapidly giving way to new lighter industries. Many new industries have been established along the west coast including plastics, footwear, electronics, fibres and public service vehicle manufacture. A substantial area of the coastal industrial belt now enjoys Enterprise Zone Status and steel closure area and N.C.B. benefits available.

During the last few years communications have improved dramatically; the motorway is just outside the Allerdale boundary and the A66.

Tourism increases annually, and is by far the most important industry in some parts of Allerdale. The district includes Keswick and the popular North Western area of the Lake District, six of the major lakes, and within the district the coastline is proving increasingly popular with holidaymakers.

Items of historical interest cover the time span from the stone circles of Keswick and Elva Plain; the Roman forts at Maryport, Papcastle and Wigton; the silver, lead and other mines and pack-horse routes in the Lake District; the more recent history of the industrial revolution on the west coast and of course the homes and haunts of the Lake District poets and the setting for Hugh Walpole's saga of Rogue Herries and his descendants.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Alnwick District Council, situated in north Northumberland, lies in one of the most beautiful parts of the country. The district is mainly rural but includes three towns, Alnwick, Amble and Rothbury, the administrative centre is in Alnwick, which is the county town of Northumberland.

The area is steeped in history, dating back to very early times, and has many places of interest including castles at Alnwick, Dunstanburgh and Warkworth; the first named being the home of the Duke of Northumberland. Evidence still exists of Roman outposts, the invasion by William the Conqueror and camp sites made by the Ancient Britons.

For the more energetic there are numerous walks in the hills and valleys particularly in the Cheviot and towards Rothbury; a large part of this area is included in the Northumberland National Park. The east coast comprises lovely villages with sandy bays stretching from Amble to Newton-by-the-Sea and including the fishing village of Craster, famous for its kippers.

Established local industries include electronics, fishing, engineering, building construction and fishing tackle manufacture. In recent years specialised activities such as climbing equipment, furniture and jewellery display have been established and a major Pharmaceutical Research Development Centre in Alnwick is now fully operational.

TOPOGRAPHY

The eastern half of the area contains most of the industrial companies of the district and is where numerous and diverse new businesses have become established following the closing of the coal mines. Most of the disused sites have been reclaimed and now accommodate new industries. The remaining sites are programmed to be reclaimed for the same purpose as well as for open spaces.

The western half of the area is mainly of a rural character containing farm land and some of the country's most beautiful scenery, lying as it does on the border of the Peak National Park.

TOPOGRAPHY

The borough of Ashford is located in East Kent and bounded by the North Downs, Weald of Kent and Romney Marsh. The main centre of population is the town of Ashford, but the Borough covers a wide geographical area containing numerous settlements including the "Cinque Port" town of Tenterden and includes some of the prettiest countryside in the county.

The town of Ashford is situated where the East Stour and the Great Stour meet, and it rose to prominence as a market town. Ashford is an important centre for road and rail communication. The Channel ports of Dover and Folkestone are only some 20 miles distant and the commercial Lydd-Ashford Airport is some 19 miles away.

The expected benefits from the Channel Tunnel project for Ashford include the provision of an International Rail Passenger Station next to the existing railway station, and an Inland Freight Clearance Depot. The completion of the Ashford-Maidstone part of the M20 is due to take place in the spring 1991 and will provide fast road links to the M25 and national motorway network.

Ashford has a diverse economy with both service and light industrial sectors well represented. There is substantial interest in the area from developers. A 40 hectare second phase of the Ashford Business Park is now on stream and has direct access to the M20 at Junction 10. Like the first phase, this phase (called Orbital Park) is also the result of a partnership with the private sector. To accommodate research based organisations, Trinity College, Cambridge have commenced work on a 33 hectare site for development as a Science/Business Park adjacent to junction 9 of the M20 which will also accommodate leisure facilities. There is also some redevelopment of sites close to the town centre to provide office accommodation where rents of up to £18 per square foot are being achieved. Interest in retail development remains keen. The town has a 60 bed Post House Hotel and a 200 bed "Moat House" Hotel and conference centre. Other hotel operators are known to be interested in sites on the periphery of the town. Although Ashford is not a tourist centre as such its facilities and location make it an ideal centre for tourism. As a result of the Channel Tunnel and improved communications Ashford is now poised to consolidate its role as a regional centre and its claim to be "the light at the end of the Tunnel".

TOPOGRAPHY

Taking its name from one of the old Saxon hundreds referred to in the Domesday Survey, the district encompasses picturesque towns and villages which are a reflection of this heritage. Medieval wool towns such as Lavenham, Long Melford and Nayland remain unspoilt examples of life four hundred years ago and with the backcloth of winding lanes and rolling fields it is not surprising that the district attracts a substantial amount of tourism. It embraces almost the whole of what is known as "Constable Country", the Stour Valley, the valleys of the Rivers Box, Brett and Glem and the historic towns of Hadleigh and Sudbury; both bustling market towns. Not all is old, though. There are modern, thriving industrial estates at Hadleigh and Chilton, just outside Sudbury which complement the latter's silk weaving associations. Sudbury houses the birthplace of Thomas Gainsborough and the ultra-modern Kingfisher Leisure Pool.

TOPOGRAPHY

Barrow is the main industrial centre for Cumbria. The catchment area population is around 120,000 with 64,500 living in Barrow itself. Furness is an area whose fortunes have always been linked with the natural resources of the sea. From the early days of iron ore export to the discovery of gas and condensates in the Irish Sea, the town and its people have adapted to develop new skills and products, many of which are regarded as world leaders in their own right.

The area is fortunate in having had over £500m worth of construction projects recently completed.

Marine engineering, underwater and defence, nuclear and electronics engineering technology are the main skills in Furness. Local growth sectors are paper, chemicals, electronics, defence, offshore and construction industries.

52% of the working population are involved in manufacturing;

5% of the working population are involved in construction;

40% of the working population are involved in service industries.

There is a large pool of female labour available.

Unemployment is one of the lowest in the North-west of England. By national standards it has a lower than average rate of unemployment (9.8% in April 1988). Labour relations are very good and costs lower than average. There is a stable, skilled labour force—the attractive local environment and national park nearby act as a powerful magnet to people wishing to live and work in the Furness area.

Main employers are BCL Limited, Scott Limited, Sovereign Chemicals, Vickers Shipbuilding and Engineering Limited, Glaxo UK Limited, Lister and Company plc, K Shoes, Furness Footwear, Barrow News and Mail, Oxley Developments, Brown and Root UK Limited, VO Offshore, Sir Alfred McAlpine and T Brady Group Limited.

313 hectares of land are available to industrialists in the Furness area together with a wide range of premises suitable for research and industrial uses.

The port of Barrow, operated by Associated British Ports plc, is already a thriving offshore support port and trades in other specialist cargoes. It is the largest port between the Mersey and the Clyde. A £20m. port entrance enlargement proposal is due to commence in 1989.

The port has been developed as an important support base for the exploration and development of offshore gas fields and for special bulk cargo handling.

The key to Barrow's present role is its location as the most westerly town on the mainland closest to offshore gasfields in the Irish Sea.

The harbour includes water depths of 7.3m to 8.6m, and the advantage of a stable non-fluctuating water depth that allows vessels to be easily loaded or unloaded.

Complete back-up facilities are available on the 37-hectare dock estate which is available for development.

No one has yet admitted that there is oil to be found in the waters of the sea of Furness, but something very close to it, condensate, is already coming ashore, together with natural gas at Britain's newest Gas Terminal. This terminal, 3km south-east of Barrow Town Centre, is part of a £1.2 billion development by British Gas Corporation to exploit their Morecambe Bay gasfield. 30Km west of Barrow.

Project Furness is a £11m scheme to reclaim the 110-hectare former Barrow Steelworks. A Department of the Environment supported, 4-year, rolling programme is well underway. The Furness Business Park, industrial areas, leisure and recreation and a maritime museum are being created. First plots are due to be available shortly.

With five new exploration areas awarded to major oil companies in May 1985 and further development by British Gas Corporation already planned, Barrow is well placed to strengthen its position as the premier offshore port in Cumbria.

Cumbria in most people's minds is linked with the Lake District National Park. Furness borders the Park and no part is more than half-hour drive from it. You can enjoy the scenery or go fishing or sailing on Coniston Water and other lakes, visit the Hay Bridge Deer Museum, Grizedale Forest or picturesque Broughton market town or do a thousand and one other things after a day's work or at weekends without having to travel long distances.

Furness itself has a remarkably contrasting landscape ranging from miles of golden sands, dunes, rolling hills, crags and moorland. Over one-quarter of the Borough of Barrow in Furness is protected for its natural interest, and much of this is open to the public for quiet pursuits.

There are good hotels, restaurants, the Theatre in the Forest, 11th century Furness Abbey, a free anchorage for yachts at Walney Channel, professional rugby league, football, craft fairs, and many sports and other clubs and societies to help one make your stay or living in Furness a healthy outdoor one.

A wide range of housing is available.

Barrow has a College of Higher Education together with a new 6th Form College and Ulverston a Further Education Centre and there is a network of voluntary pre-school playgroups, a comprehensive secondary education provision and most villages have their own primary school.

The area's medical services are centred on the new 480-bed Furness General Hospital, two miles from the centre of Barrow.

The Barrow Council are also intending over the next five years to build a major new 250,000 square foot town centre shopping development and a leisure complex and 140,000 ft² of out of town shopping.

Good road, Intercity sleeper rail, sea and air communications and telecommunications facilities are all available.

The recently improved A590 trunk road, much of it dual carriageway standard, has brought Furness very close to the M6 motorway. Further improvements at Newby Bridge, High Newton and Dalton in Furness will make this an even safer, shorter journey.

Furness has a daily InterCity Sleeper Express link with London and frequent feeder services provide links to expresses to the south-west, Scotland, Midlands, Leeds, Hull and Manchester. Sidings at Barrow bring British Rail's Speedlink freight services to Furness. Local delivery and carrier services provide a door-to-door link throughout the UK.

TOPOGRAPHY

An area that has undergone considerable development since the southern part of the district was designated as Basildon New Town in 1949. The population of the New Town has now expanded to 101,670.

There are some 600 manufacturing and service industries on various industrial estates and a modern pedestrian shopping precinct in the town centre, with an open market trading five days a week. A giant Savacentre store is linked to Eastgate International Shopping Centre, an air-conditioned four level covered shopping mall believed to be the largest in the country. In the northern part of the district are the two expanding townships of Billericay (35,120) and Wickford (24,420). The Fenchurch Street-Southend railway line runs through the southern part of the district with stations at Laindon, Basildon and Pitsea. The Liverpool Street-Southend railway line runs through the northern part of the district with stations at Billericay and Wickford. The A127 and A13 roads also traverse the district. The Council administers some 1,395 acres of parks, recreation grounds, open spaces and allotments, including an 18-hole municipal golf course and the country's National Motorboat Museum at Wat Tyler Country Park in Pitsea. There is a championship-size swimming pool in Basildon; district pools at Pitsea, Wickford and Billericay; five sports centres; and the Towngate Theatre in Basildon. As well as the considerable development, the area contains several beauty spots including Langdon Hills which is one of the highest points in Essex.

TOPOGRAPHY

The district stretches from the River Trent on the east to the Yorkshire/Derbyshire boundary on the west, covering an area of 247 square miles.

Bassetlaw is a fast developing area, possessing considerable potential for industry, commerce and office development. A variety of light industrial firms are established in the Worksop and Retford areas and land is available for industry in various parts of the district. In addition, there are three Power Stations within the District boundary, which make an immense impact upon the local economy, and four collieries.

Bassetlaw has good communication links with most parts of the country, being in close proximity to the M1, the M18 and the A1(M) which neatly bisects the district. Retford is on the main (now electrified) line from Kings Cross to Edinburgh and also the Liverpool to Grimsby line. There is a small airport at Gamston, near Retford.

Sporting activities are well catered for in the district with both public facilities and many private clubs. The Leisure Centres at Worksop, Bircotes and Retford provide a comprehensive range of recreational activities together with social bars and lounge facilities. In addition, the Bassetlaw Leisure Centre offers facilities for indoor bowls, snooker, indoor tennis and athletics. County Cricket is played at Worksop and International Golf at Worksop and Lindrick. Kilton Forest Golf Course, an 18-hole municipal course, is located on the northern outskirts of Worksop. International Horse Trials are held at Clumber Park and Osberton, both near Worksop.

Clumber Park, a National Trust Property, is open to the public at all times and attracts thousands of visitors each year. Kings' Park in Retford, comprising an area of some 29 acres, is also an ideal recreational venue. In addition to formal gardens, tennis courts and a bowling green, there is a large area of open space for picnics, relaxation and for play. Langold Park, just north of Worksop, provides facilities for fishing, sailing and canoeing. Leisure activities include boating on the Chesterfield Canal and two main sources of interest in the area are Wetlands Water Fowl Reserve and North Leverton Mill (the oldest working windmill in Nottinghamshire).

Facilities for the theatre and the arts are to be found at the Regal Arts Centre in Worksoop and Retford Little Theatre. Annual events within the district are the Bassetlaw Festival (June/July), Bassetlaw Show (September) and Bassetlaw Catering and Licensed Trades Exhibition (March).

The Nottinghamshire County Council is the Education Authority for the district and has provided excellent facilities for school, Adult and Further Education. The Worksoop College Public School has facilities for 400 boys and there are several minor private schools within the area.

The Pump Room, Guildhall, Assembly Rooms, Roman Baths, Art Gallery and the Museum of Costume are under the control of the Council and open to the public. The Holburne of Menstrie Museum, the Huntingdon Centre, the American Museum, the Postal Museum, the Herschel House Museum, the Royal Photographic Society, Mr. Bowler's Business, Beckford Tower Museum, Museum of English Naive Art, the Royal Literary and Scientific Institution, 1 Royal Crescent are not Council owned, but are also open to the public.

The Council in partnership with the Government and individual owners is carrying out an extensive programme of cleaning and restoring the facades of many of the City's famous Georgian Buildings.

TOPOGRAPHY

The town of Berwick-upon-Tweed is the administrative centre of the Borough which bears its name. It lies two miles south of the Scottish border on the north bank of the River Tweed, with the townships of Tweedmouth and Spittal lying on the south bank of the river mouth. It is one of Britain's most historic towns, encircled by medieval walls, recognised as among the finest in Europe. The A1 Trunk Road by-passes the town to the west. The by-pass was opened in November 1983 and is approximately 8.7 km long, incorporating a new four span road bridge crossing the tidal section of the River Tweed near East Ord.

The Borough is mainly rural in character, relying on agriculture, fishing and light industry, with centres of population at Belford, Norham, Seahouses and Wooler. The island of Lindisfarne or Holy Island, with its early association with Christianity, lies off the coast a few miles south of Berwick-upon-Tweed. Access to the Island is by causeway at low tide and here can be seen the ruins of the 11th century Priory, with a fairy-tale castle atop a hill on the seaward side, both reminders of the Island's stormy past. The Farne Islands, renowned for their seal and bird sanctuaries, lie off Seahouses. Here in 1838, took place the famous rescue by Grace Darling of survivors from the wreck of the Forfarshire. The heroine is buried at Bamburgh, where there is a museum in her memory.

All about there is the feel of history, spreading from the historic town of Berwick-upon-Tweed, with its walls, 18th century Town Hall and Barracks and the open air market (held each Wednesday and Saturday under a Charter of James I) to Norham Castle, Holy Island, Bamburgh Castle and the battle-fields of Flodden (1513) and Halidon (1333).

In a picturesque countryside are the north east slopes of the Cheviot Hills on the edge of Northumberland National Park, with fine walks in moorlands and valleys, while rivers and streams provide fine sport for rod and line. The coastline is designated as an Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty and provides much enjoyment and pleasure for the tourist, with numerous caravan sites both there and in the inland areas as well.

The Borough Council is anxious to encourage the establishment of further light industry, both in Berwick-upon-Tweed and in the sub-growth points of Belford, Seahouses and Wooler. An excellent road and rail network make the Borough a not unattractive target for the prospective industrialist.

TOPOGRAPHY

The borough comprises an attractive area to the north of the River Humber. Its name is derived from the town of Beverley which was incorporated by Charter of Queen Elizabeth I on 15th July 1573 and which is a popular tourist centre with a fine Minster and many other buildings of interest to the visitor.

There are also a number of picturesque villages in the surrounding rural area which contains some of the best agricultural land in the country.

The South Eastern part of the district comprises the townships of Willerby, Cottingham and Hessle which are popular residential areas.

There is considerable residential development taking place in the borough and this will continue in the foreseeable future. Industrial expansion is also envisaged and the district already contains some important industrial concerns.

Electricity Board: East Midlands.

Gas Region: East Midlands.

Water Co.: Severn-Trent.

District Health Authority: Leicestershire.

Superannuation Scheme administered by Leicestershire CC.

Audit by District Auditor (No. 11 Audit District).

TOPOGRAPHY

The district is situated to the south and west of the City of Leicester covering an area of approximately 50 square miles of the original 'Leicester Forest'. There are 24 parishes of varying sizes and extensive development has taken place in some areas. Whilst there are large areas of high quality agricultural land, particularly in the southern parishes, there is a wide variety of industries in the district. Housing accommodation to suit all tastes can be obtained.

Access to the M1 motorway which crosses the district, can be obtained at Junction 21 which is only a short distance north of the motorway link to the M6. The M69 motorway (Leicester to Coventry) also joins with the M1 at Junction 21. The East Midlands Airport is 22 miles north of this junction and the Birmingham and Luton airports are within easy reach of the district.

Long before the advent of the motorway, the Romans had established a major road system in the area. The Fosse Way and Watling Street meet on the southern boundary of the district at High Cross and many examples of this period in the early history of Leicestershire can be found along these ancient highways.

The motorway links make the district attractive for industrial and commercial investment. Amongst traditional industries in the district are engineering, quarrying, pre-cast concrete and hosiery. Together with a strong service/office sector, modern business and extensive warehousing and distribution facilities these provide employment on a large scale. The new Motorways Employment Area encompasses 120 acres of development and is expected to increase to around 300 acres, including a high quality Business Park close to the M1/M69. This will ensure the continuation and development of Blaby as a modern employment centre. A large new shopping centre, with extensive free parking is due to open during the Autumn in this general location.

The excellent road and rail communications, the wide diversity of housing schemes and pleasant surrounds combine to make the Blaby district an ideal area in which to live and work. In addition, excellent leisure, recreation and cultural facilities are available in Leicester and, relatively close at hand, in the other cities of the East Midlands.

TOPOGRAPHY

Once the weaving centre of the world, Blackburn is no longer pre-eminently a textile town. It now has a wide spread of industry, including several industrial estates, with electronic, heavy and precision engineering, paper felt manufacture and a prominent tufted carpet machinery manufacturer. It is the centre of the brewing industry for a large part of the north and other products include slippers, car accessories, paints and, of course, textiles.

Also recognised as a market and retail centre, the town now boasts one of the finest comprehensive covered markets in the country. The entire town centre, covering over 100 acres, has been developed on a comprehensive basis as a traffic-free shopping precinct, with car parking above and service access below. The first phase, completed in 1970, comprises 60 shops, 3 supermarkets, a departmental store and also a large luxury nightclub providing entertainment and catering facilities for 1,000 people. The second phase, completed in 1972, provides additional shopping facilities and more car-parking spaces and the third and final phase comprising a major departmental store and additional shops has now been completed.

Darwen is a town which has largely developed since the time of the industrial revolution on its basic industries of cotton spinning and weaving, coal mining and the manufacture of paper. Although mining has lapsed and the cotton trade has shrunk considerably, wallpaper manufacture with a world wide distribution is still an important part of Darwen's industrial scene. The introduction of other traditional and contemporary industries, such as engineering and the manufacture of paint and plastics, has now provided for a wider field of employment.

The Borough offers a full range of recreational facilities including Community Centres and sports complex, an athletics track, golf courses, sailing, a designated Country Park and concerts of international standing.

The Borough has the only cathedral in the new County of Lancashire, to which substantial extensions have been completed and within the rural area of the Borough, Turton Tower, an early 15th century mansion which also houses a museum, is open to the public.

Blackpool is recognised as the largest and most popular holiday resort in the country. A relevant survey concluded that almost 17 million individual visits are made annually and the total tourism spend is £445,000,000. Millions of pounds have been spent by the Council and private enterprises in the provision of a most extensive range of amenities and attractions which include a 7-mile-long promenade with safe sandy beaches, 3 piers, Pleasure Beach, Fun Park, Model Village, and swimming pool. Newest developments are a £1 million indoor flat green bowling centre, one of the best-equipped in the world, and a new sports stadium at Stanley Park which features Britain's most advanced all-weather synthetic pitches for football and hockey.

The Council have developed a modern, exciting Zoo Park, adjacent to Stanley Park. Outdoors there are two golf courses, crown and flat bowling greens, hard and grass tennis courts and sailing and boating on the open sea and at Stanley Park. The cricket season provides league, county and representative games and there are senior league fixtures for both Soccer and Rugby League enthusiasts.

Entertainment is provided on a fabulous scale and the summer-season programme includes 8 live shows including an Ice Rink with a resident summer Ice Show, Cabaret Clubs and Cinemas. There are around 37 night clubs, discos and night spots, including the £2.2 million Palace where the multiple light rig is among the most sophisticated in the world. Below the 520-ft. high Tower is housed a magnificent ballroom, roof gardens, aquarium, managerie and an international circus. The Sandcastle Centre is a multi-million pound venture developed jointly by the Council and private enterprise. The Centre provides the largest covered area of water in Europe with water slides and other water based attractions. It also provides non stop live entertainment in summer. Each autumn the Council spends approximately £1,250,000 on an extensive scheme of decorative illuminations and the success of this attraction draws upwards of 8 million late-season visitors.

Modern electric tramcars are a feature of the promenade transport service which is the only remaining system of this kind in Britain.

TOPOGRAPHY

Blyth Valley Council covers the smallest area of any of the District Councils in Northumberland but has the highest population. It is the growth-point and the industrial centre of the County.

The area suffered considerably through the closure of the coal-mines; the loss of ship-building and ship repair yards at Blyth and on Tyneside.

However, following these closures new industries have been attracted to the area by the development of industrial estates at Blyth, and by the development of Cramlington New Town. The Harbour at Blyth has attracted firms related to the offshore industry.

The New Town at Cramlington is being developed by the County Council, the District Council and a group of private developers.

Communications are excellent, with motorway links to London and the South, a port at Blyth, and an easy 20 minute journey to Newcastle Airport. It is a very historical area which includes Delaval Hall, the home of Lord Hastings and masterpiece of Sir John Vanbrugh, builder of Blenheim Palace and Castle Howard. The deep-water harbour at Blyth became a quite famous submarine-base during the First and Second World Wars.

It is also an area of natural beauty possessing a three to four mile stretch of beach, with beautiful links and foreshore; a number of excellent parks, an 18 hole golf-course constructed by the local authority, all within a 30 minute car journey to Northumberland's National Park and the Scottish borders.

The Council has provided Concordia Leisure Centre at Cramlington and a Sports Centre at Blyth satisfying equally the recreational requirements of the area and providing a quality of life enjoyed by residents and visitors alike.

Mayoral annual allowance: £1,690.

TOPOGRAPHY

The area is pleasantly situated on the border with Nottinghamshire. The area has many historical associations, including Hardwick Hall, the Elizabethan Mansion, built by Elizabeth, Dowager Countess of Shrewsbury (Bess of Hardwick) and now maintained by the National Trust. The Churches in the area date back to Norman times in many cases.

Historical associations also include Barlborough Hall built in 1583 and now used as a school; Steeley Chapel, the finest example of Norman architecture in the country; Creswell Crags, a very important archaeological site which has produced evidence of the earliest known form of human habitation in the country dating back more than 20,000 years; and Bolsover Castle which dominates the local countryside and has its origins in Norman times. The present building dates from the 17th century.

The district still has a number of working collieries but no longer has a large reliance on the mining industry which once dominated the area. The town of Bolsover contains the largest smokeless fuel producing plant in the country.

A prominent amount of the district is used for agricultural purposes. An increasing amount of land in recent years has been given over to light industrial use. The Council have established industrial sites at Clowne, Bolsover, Shirebrook, Pinxton, Tibshelf and South Normanton, all within a few miles of the M1.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Boothferry Borough is centred around the Port of Goole and comprises the former rural districts of Goole, Howden and the Isle of Axholme in addition to the town of Goole.

The district stretches from the edge of the Yorkshire Wolds at Holme on Spalding Moor to the bed of the River Trent at Owston Ferry. Five rivers form the key feature of the district which consists mainly of agricultural land.

Growing industry is present around the developing port and town of Goole, which is the most inland port on the east coast standing 50 miles from the North Sea on the River Ouse. Its frequent services to the Continent provide an economical outlet for exports from West Yorkshire, Lancashire and the Midlands, with which the port is connected by road, rail and inland waterways. The M62 motorway passes within two miles of the port which makes Goole one of the best motorway-connected ports in the U.K. In total Boothferry contains 28 miles of motorway and five motorway junctions on the M62, M18 and M180. This provides fast and efficient access to the main national north-south and east-west transport arteries from all parts of the borough, particularly the major industrial areas, offering excellent opportunities for growth. There has been considerable development at wharves in the Ouse and Trent, and growing regional airports are nearby.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough of Boston has a population of 52,909 (of whom over 26,991 live within the town of Boston) and it covers 137 square miles in the former Holland division of Lincolnshire. Well served by main and subsidiary roads and crossed by the Grantham to Skegness rail route, the Borough extends for many miles along the western side of The Wash, is watered by the lower reaches of River Witham (on which Boston stands) and by numerous 'drains', and, at its southern edge, is bounded in part by the River Welland.

This is one of the most productive agricultural areas in England consisting, in the main, of alluvial reclaimed land which is intensively farmed with cereal and vegetable growing on a vast scale. An agricultural research station is established in the area and a great many of the industries, both at Boston and in some of the villages, are directly linked with agriculture. Boston is an important market town with a weekly poultry market and a general market held twice a week. Agriculture, however, is not the only interest in the area and many light industries have been established, some of them on Boston's three Industrial Estates. Boston, too, is an important port of many years standing, its docks, quays and warehouses providing the natural gateway for the industrial Midlands and its trade with the Continent.

Neither town nor district lacks any modern amenity. Schools throughout the area are of the highest standard and Boston is quite an educational centre. Amenities for recreation are good and range from fishing in the rivers to swimming at Boston's pool or to enjoying a play at the town's excellent theatre or concerts at the Sam Newsom Music Centre.

TOPOGRAPHY

Bournemouth possesses the reputation of being a leading resort and holiday town in Great Britain. This reputation is based on many factors, including its equable climate, its position on the sea, the vast unspoiled countryside of Dorset, Wiltshire and the New Forest which forms its hinterland, the good road and rail communications now supplemented by air travel facilities through Bournemouth (Hurn) Airport, a regional shopping centre of high standard, extensive entertainment and recreational facilities, and a wide range of accommodation for visitors including the largest number of first class hotel rooms of any town outside London. The Council is continually reviewing the facilities which are necessary to meet the full potential demands and the improvement of the town's attractions.

The town is proud of its miles of sea-front and sandy beaches extending from Alum Chine to Hengistbury Head which have been developed in a manner which preserves natural beauty, and although road access is accorded, the principal beach areas are completely free from vehicular traffic. The Council is responsible for providing conference, theatre, restaurant and café facilities, and has built an International Centre which caters for major conference business and attracts international as well as British patronage. The building, on the West Cliff, is also adaptable to provide top attractions for residents and visitors. There are over 1,800 acres of public parks and gardens including two municipally-owned 18-hole golf courses.

The Borough is an attractive area, including a large proportion of forested land, which has easy access to London, Reading and Windsor. The Borough is administered from the former New Town of Bracknell.

Bracknell Town comprises 3,285 acres and the present population is 51,418. Within the Town area there is a wide diversity of industry including a large proportion of high technology industries. It is surrounded by more rural parishes set in the Green Belt and the Borough extends to Sandhurst and Crowthorne to the south and part of Ascot to the east. It is expected that the population of the Borough will grow to over 100,000 by 1991. The New Town Development Corporation was dissolved in June 1982, following which community assets in the Town were transferred to the Council from the New Towns Commission in May 1983. This included extensive open spaces and landscaped areas. The Council is actively involved both in the provision of general amenities in the Borough and in new residential development in co-operation with the private sector. A Sports and Leisure Centre with running track, football pitch, grandstand and a wide range of indoor sporting and social activities, including three swimming pools, has recently been re-opened after undergoing a major refurbishment. Neighbourhood Sports Centres can also be found in Crowthorne and Sandhurst. Coral Reef, Bracknell's Water World opened in 1989 and offers a wide range of family water experiences including a sauna, jacuzzi and three flumes. A large Arts Centre, which includes a 330 seat theatre opened in 1984 offers a varied programme to cater for all tastes in music and the arts. Recent retail improvements in and around Bracknell Town Centre have seen a town centre shopping precinct opened in 1984 and a new retail warehouse park opened early in 1989. Adjacent to this, an Entertainments Centre incorporating a multi-screen cinema, bowling alley and nightclub opened in May 1990. Future proposals for the Borough include a Heritage Centre (due to open early in 1991), and a tennis centre (under construction).

TOPOGRAPHY

The district includes the towns of Baintree, Halstead and Witham in an attractive rural area. The M11, A12 and main railway service provide fast, easy access to London and the rest of the country. Stansted Airport is within 30 minutes travelling time of Baintree.

The three towns retain many long-established local firms engaged in traditional manufacturing industries, particularly engineering, and have attracted a variety of new industries and office developments.

Baintree and Witham have been involved in town expansion schemes with the GLC, and new industrial estates have been developed at Springwood, Baintree, Freebournes Road, Witham and Blue Bridge, Halstead.

Major housing developments have taken place in recent years, and with the district's population still growing, more land is being made available for industry, offices and housing. The District Council provides sites and buildings for new business and will consider partnership schemes with private industry.

Braintree District takes a positive and innovative approach to its top priority, employment creation. Under the slogan "Braintree Means Business" the Council are pursuing a number of schemes to encourage employment, investment and initiative within the Council's area.

TOPOGRAPHY

The district is predominantly rural in character, much of it being given over to agriculture with large open areas of heathland (the Brecklands, from which the district takes its name). It extends from the southern boundary of the County to within 10 miles of the sea in the north, a distance of 30 miles. There are 115 parishes but the population is centred around the five main towns of Attleborough, Dereham, Swaffham, Thetford and Watton.

The District Council is pursuing an active programme to promote industrial development in all five towns and factories and work-shops are available for new and existing firms.

Leisure and recreation are well provided for with sports centres at Thetford and Swaffham, a sports hall at Attleborough and swimming pools at Thetford and Dereham. The Watton Town Council owns a sports centre and swimming pool and many private facilities exist throughout the district. At Banham there is a zoo and at Kilverstone, near Thetford, there is a New World Wildlife Park. The National Trust owns the historic Oxborough Hall at Oxborough, eight miles south-west of Swaffham, and neolithic flint mines at Grimes Graves near Weeting, under the control of the Department of the Environment, are open to the public. The Snetterton motor racing circuit is situated just off the A11 trunk road, some 10 miles east of Thetford.

Wide areas are taken up by forests maintained by the Forestry Commission with camp sites and picnic areas, and a large tract is used by the Ministry of Defence as a Battle Training Area.

The whole district is steeped in history and this and other features provide many attractions for visitors and residents alike.

BRIDGNORTH (Shropshire)

Elections are of whole council.

Pop., 50,600; NDRV, £13,312,620; Community Charge, £307.26; Debt, £15,500,000; Area, 63,367 hectares.

Parliamentary Constituency: Ludlow.

Electricity Board: Midlands.

Gas Region: West Midlands.

Water Co.: Severn-Trent.

District Health Authority: Shropshire.

Superannuation Scheme administered by Shropshire CC.

Audit by BDO Binder Hamlyn.

Agencies. The Council act as agents to the Regional Water Authority under Section 15 of the Water Act, 1973.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Bridgnorth district extends over 245 square miles of the south-eastern corner of Shropshire, and is bounded by the district of the Wrekin (including the new town of Telford), the borough of Shrewsbury and Atcham, the South Shropshire district, and the Staffordshire and Worcestershire borders. It has a population of 51,200. The River Severn flows through the middle of the district, and can only be crossed by vehicles at the bridge in Bridgnorth, which makes the town the natural centre for the area.

The district was formed in 1974 by the amalgamation of the former Bridgnorth and Shifnal rural districts. This followed an earlier reorganisation in 1966 when the former Borough of Bridgnorth, and part of the former Borough of Wenlock, were merged with the Bridgnorth Rural District.

Bridgnorth, the district's principal town, is strategically placed as its central point. On the west of the Severn the district extends along the valleys of the River Rea and Borle Brook towards the uplands culminating in the long line of Wenlock Edge, at the eastern end of which is the small town of Much Wenlock. East of the Severn the district includes the gentle valley of the River Worfe, and it extends north around the perimeter of Telford to include the town of Shifnal and the residential areas around Albrighton and Donington.

Although there are several flourishing industries in Bridgnorth and Shifnal, and in other small towns and large villages, the district is almost wholly agricultural. Much of it is sparsely populated, the villages being small, compact and often quite remote. In the main this is a country of low hills, winding lanes and river valleys, but with changes of landscape where Wenlock Edge raises its length, and in the north-east around and beyond Shifnal where the country is more level, the villages less compact, and the scenery is more reminiscent of a country park.

Well served by good roads and with the northern area bisected by the Wolverhampton to Shrewsbury railway, the district is easily reached. It is increasingly popular as a place of residence and has a great deal to offer the tourist. The natural beauty of the countryside is enhanced by the grace and interest of such buildings as Wenlock Priory, Tong Church and Boscobel House, whilst other obvious attractions are the Severn Valley Railway, the Midland Motor Museum, the Cosford Aerospace Museum, and sports centres at Bridgnorth, Much Wenlock and Shifnal. The Bridgnorth District is delightfully varied, as much in its history as in its landscape. It is perhaps best understood as a bridge between upland and lowland Britain, between the crowded West Midlands conurbation, which is the working place of many of those who live in its northern and eastern parts, and the beautiful but sparsely populated hills of the Borderland.

TOPOGRAPHY

As well as carrying out the various sea-front and sea-defence works associated with a popular seaside resort, the Council owns and manages many of the town's well-known tourist attractions. The Pavilion Estate with its world-famous Royal Pavilion is used for the Regency Exhibition, conferences and social functions and The Dome for entertainments, concerts, etc. The Estate also houses the museum, art gallery and the central library.

The Booth Museum with its collection of British birds was bequeathed to the Council by its creator E. T. Booth and Preston Manor with its museum and adjoining public park was given to the town by the Stanford Family. The race ground was presented to the town by the Race Stand Trustees and is managed by lessees who are members of the Council.

The Council has substantial land-holdings in the town as well as approximately 15,000 acres of the surrounding downland. In 1947 the Council acquired the Stanmer Estate which comprises approximately 4,958 acres of land situated on both sides of the Lewes-Brighton road. The Council has leased Stanmer House and approximately 159 acres of land on the estate to the University of Sussex for the establishment of the University.

Conferences

An increasing number of conferences and exhibitions are held in Brighton each year and the town is one of the few resorts to employ staff specially for this purpose.

Within the 15-acre Churchill Square Development, stands one 5,000 seater multi-purpose conference, exhibition and entertainments centre known as the Brighton Centre. It is the largest of its kind in Britain incorporating the latest designs in audio-visual aids, simultaneous interpretation equipment, press and television facilities.

Brighton Festival of the Arts

The Brighton Festival of the Arts is held in May. Its object is to point to contemporary and future developments in the arts against a background of Brighton's history and traditions. International artists of drama, music and the arts regularly appear in an extensive programme of main and 'fringe' events.

TOPOGRAPHY

Bristol is one of the oldest cities in the United Kingdom. It was created a county in 1373 and a county borough in 1881. On 1st April 1974 it became one of the districts in the new county of Avon and is the largest non-metropolitan district in England and Wales. The city can now be said to be at the cross-roads of Britain, with its proximity to the junction of the M4 and M5 motorways. It has excellent rail connections and its own international airport. In addition, the city operates the largest municipally-owned dock undertaking in the United Kingdom.

The City Council delegates its docks powers to the Docks Committee which acts under the style of The Port of Bristol Authority and is responsible for conservancy, navigational aids and the provision of capital equipment such as quays, sheds and cranes. The port comprises the docks of Avonmouth and the new Royal Portbury Dock, which are constructed in close proximity to the mouth of the River Avon. Royal Portbury Dock can accommodate six vessels of 70,000 tonnes deadweight at any one time, entry being gained by a lock 1,200 feet long by 140 feet wide. A mile long private access road links the dock with the M5 motorway interchange No. 19 at Portbury and good connections to the National rail network exist. Principal imports through the existing facilities and associated trading estates are animal feeding stuffs, refined petroleum products, forest products, cars, molasses, coal, fertilizers, concentrates and chemicals.

Bristol Airport is situated on the A38, 8 miles south of Bristol towards Taunton.

Current passenger figures are just over 900,000 per annum, and to cater for them the main terminal building has been extended and refurbished to create a modern, efficient environment. 65% of the passengers are travelling on chartered flights to the major European holiday resorts from Cyprus to the Canary Islands, with new destinations being added each season. Scheduled service flights are also increasing, with the recent addition of flights to Brussels and Manchester as well as upgrades on many existing routes. Scheduled services will see ever greater expansion when Brymon Airways take delivery of a Dash 8 aircraft which will be based at Bristol Airport.

The Airport itself has undergone major enlargement and improvements in terminal facilities with the final stage, the extension of the check-in concourse, completed in May 1988. This area has a shop selling all a traveller could require, and there is an Information Desk which can make hotel reservations and has a Fax Bureau and Bureau de Change. Car hire facilities provided by Europcar, Hertz and Avis are situated in the arrivals area and there is inexpensive car parking close to the terminal building.

The International Departure Lounge, which was recently doubled in size, has a large Duty and Tax-Free Shop, 24-hour licensed bar and 'The Brunel Lounge'—an executive lounge with comfortable seating, work desk, telephone, coffee, orange juice and a selection of the day's papers. This lounge is exclusively for regular business travellers and cars and access keys are available through the airlines' local sales representatives.

Bristol's situation on the main transport arteries of Britain is leading to the city becoming increasingly popular as a venue for national and international exhibitions and conferences and a popular tourist centre. There are several large luxury hotels within the city and a wide range of other accommodation. Visitors can enjoy themselves in 1,725 hectares of open spaces, administered by the city. The city also operates eleven swimming pools, including one open air, and five comprehensive sports centres, with facilities for squash, badminton, table tennis, sauna, bowls, etc. The city docks, which are now almost completely devoid of commercial traffic, have been largely redeveloped with areas for business, residential, retail and leisure activities. The city also boasts one of the largest entertainment complexes in Europe as well as nineteen cinema screens in the central area, three major theatres and a concert hall.

Bristol has the most extensive heritage of parks and open spaces in relation to the size of its population of any city in the United Kingdom.

Mayoral annual allowance: £5,500.

TOPOGRAPHY

The district comprises the township of Bromsgrove, the villages of Catshill, Bournheath, Marlbrook, Blackwell, Barnt Green and Rubery and the fourteen parishes of the former Rural District of Bromsgrove. Bromsgrove itself is an ancient market town situate on the A38 approximately 13 miles south of Birmingham and about the same distance north of Worcester. It is also at the junction of main roads to Kidderminster, Stourbridge and Redditch. Whilst predominantly a residential area, in the life of which agriculture plays an important part, the district has its industrial side. Many residents are employed at the British Leyland motor works, situate on the northern boundary of the district, and in Bromsgrove itself at, inter alia, the home of one of Europe's largest forging organisations, the Newton Works of Garrington's Limited, one of the companies in the vast GKN Group. The Council have developed industrial estates at Aston Fields, Buntsford Hill and Rubery.

The district is well served from the educational viewpoint in that it possesses a public school, and a college of further education, now combined to form a higher education complex, high schools and many excellent middle and primary schools.

The council owns markets and allotments and various recreation grounds. Sanders Park, not far from the town centre, contains a variety of recreational facilities, viz. bowling green, tennis courts, putting green, trim trail, etc.

Development in the parishes is mainly residential and several are urban in character. Collection of house refuse is undertaken weekly throughout the District.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough has a solid stone-built character and is surrounded by fine countryside including areas of special landscape and outstanding natural beauty. It offers pleasant living conditions together with a wide range of shopping, employment and recreation facilities. The M65 gives access to the national motorway network at both Manchester and Preston.

Radical changes have taken place in the industrial base following the decline of textiles and mining during the 1960's and 1970's. The area has diversified into high technology, engineering and manufacturing in fields such as aero space, plastics, paper, electronics and vehicle electrical components, tyres and exhausts.

The Borough offers extensive and varied leisure facilities including more than 1,000 acres of parkland and excellent facilities for tennis, golf, football, cricket, bowls, putting and tennis. The William Thompson Recreation Centre provides swimming and diving facilities of regional significance as well as sports halls and squash courts.

The area is rich in historical interest. Towneley Hall, now an art gallery and museum, attracts large numbers of visitors and is set in beautiful parkland. Gawthorpe Hall, owned by the National Trust, is also very popular. The Council has completed a £2 million refurbishment of the Grade II* listed Mechanics Institute adjoining the Town Hall for use as a multi-purpose arts and entertainments centre.

The Borough has close links with the Armed Forces—The Queen's Lancashire Regiment holds the Freedom of the Borough, and the Royal Navy Frigate H.M.S. Active has been adopted by the town.

There are special facilities for tourists including a guide service, and the City has a number of English Language schools which cater—particularly during the summer months—for overseas students. There are many commons and open spaces reaching into the centre of the city and excellent bathing facilities, indoor and outdoor and the multi-purpose Kelsey Kerridge Sports Hall.

Industry is diverse and although strictly controlled includes a number of light industrial undertakings of considerable size particularly in the electronics field, part of the worldwide Philips organisation, being an outstanding example.

Shopping facilities are good at both the historic centre and at the new Grafton centre.

The University provides conference facilities and many organisations, a number of them international in character, meet in Cambridge.

TOPOGRAPHY

Canterbury, the seat of the Primacy of All England and one of the oldest towns in the country, joins with the residential and seaside towns of Herne

Bay and Whitstable and the rural district of Bridge Blean to make up the City of Canterbury.

The City with a continuous history from Roman times was constituted a County Borough in 1888, but its earliest charter extant is one of Henry II. It is the main shopping and educational centre for East Kent.

The seaside resorts of Herne Bay and Whitstable have a continuous coastline of over 14 miles extending from Seasalter in the west to Reculver in the east. Built-up promenades extend for well over half of this distance. Popular for water sports competitions.

Whitstable is noted for its oyster fisheries which are operated under charters of considerable antiquity (Oyster Festival—July).

The needs of education are well served by a Regional College of Art, a day and evening Technical College, Grammar Schools for boys and girls, 41 Primary Schools and 11 Secondary Schools. A Church of England College of Teacher Training and Higher Education, the University of Kent and The King's School, are also established in the district as well as many private schools.

The 1,000 seat regional Marlowe Theatre provides a wide programme of opera, ballet and drama and is the base for the Canterbury International Arts Festival whilst seasonal entertainment is presented by the council at the King's Hall, Herne Bay. The Pier Pavilion Sports Centre at Herne Bay caters for spectator and other sports to complement the non-spectator sports centres at Canterbury and Whitstable.

The council owns and administers the harbour, swimming bath, car parks, a modern cattle market, general markets, caravan parks, foreshore rights and amenities, boating lakes, allotments, burial grounds, recreation grounds and well laid out parks. It also operates a full catering division and three Tourist Information Centres now run in partnership with the Chamber of Trade. The administrative centre is Canterbury with divisional offices at both Herne Bay and Whitstable.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Scottish border forms the northern boundary of the City for a distance of 20 miles. To the east lie the North Pennines and the Northumberland National Park; to the west the Solway Firth; and to the south the beautiful Eden Valley and the Lake District National Park. The old City of Carlisle was granted its first charter in 1158 and has many historic buildings such as the Cathedral, the east window of which is considered to be one of the finest in Europe; the Castle, where Mary Queen of Scots was imprisoned; Town Hall (which houses a visitor centre), Guildhall (now restored and opened as a museum), Tithe Barn and parts of the city walls. Hadrian's Wall bisects the City from east to west. Carlisle as a Roman town was the largest settlement on the wall and the Carlisle Museum and Art Gallery at Tullie House includes a major Roman collection. Further major Roman excavations are taking place in the City. Carlisle is a busy commercial and agricultural centre where some of the largest livestock auction marts in the country are situated. There is a diversity of industry, some on modern industrial estates immediately adjoining the M6 motorway. Carlisle is an important rail centre and is the Motorail terminal for the Lake District and Southern Scotland. The Council operates an airport. There is a traditional flourishing shopping centre and entertainments and cultural facilities are provided for a wide area. The Lanes a major city centre redevelopment scheme completed in 1984 and which opens out on to a landscaped pedestrianisation scheme covering much of the central area of the city. Two out of town superstores have opened to the north of the urban area and planning permissions are extant for two others. A modern Civic Centre houses City and some County Council services for the area. There is also a Technical College and College of Art and Design.

During 1989 work was started on the refurbishment of the city's Victorian Market Hall and on the extension of Tullie House Museum and Art Gallery to provide a Heritage Centre.

The Council runs an 18-hole golf course at Stoney Holme beside the River Eden in Carlisle and nearby is a miniature golf course at the Swifts. In addition, there are two 18-hole golf courses within the rural area of the city at Aglionby and Brampton. There is a modern 33½ metre swimming pool with a secondary pool. The Sands Centre a major multi purpose Leisure Centre constructed on a site beside the River Eden caters for indoor sports, spectator sports, cultural and entertainment events, exhibitions and conferences. The main hall has a capacity of over 1500. The rural area contains large stretches of unspoiled countryside and the highest point within the city is Cold Fell (2,041 ft.). The main towns in the rural area are Brampton, Longtown and Dalston.

TOPOGRAPHY

The centre of administration of the district is Morpeth, which lies in the Wansbeck Valley surrounded by wooded slopes, whilst the river provides a focal point and is a setting for many of the town's most attractive features. Originally the A1 trunk road ran through the centre, but it is now by-passed by this road to the west of the town.

The Northumberland moors and the Cheviot Hills are less than an hour's run away, whilst nearer at hand, within the rural areas of the district, are delightful places for picnics, fishing, sight-seeing or walking. Morpeth is, therefore, an excellent centre and there is a good bus and train service to and from the town.

Surrounding Morpeth are found areas of moorland, magnificent beaches, wooded valleys and unspoilt villages.

Norman inspired remains can be seen at Newminster Abbey, the Chantry and the Castle in Morpeth. The area was once a centre of fierce border warfare and remains of many fortified manors and pele towers bear witness to this.

The coast line within the district commences at Lynemouth and there is an excellent caravan site, owned by the council, at Creswell on the eastern edge of Druridge Bay. The area stretches from there southwards to the beautiful Tyne valley and the Roman Wall.

The Newcastle airport is situated at the southern end of the district within the village of Ponteland which lies 2 miles north-west of Newcastle upon Tyne and 12 miles south of Morpeth.

Playing fields, recreation grounds and parks have been extensively provided and in addition there are golf clubs at Morpeth and Ponteland.

There is extensive private development at Ponteland and in and around Morpeth.

TOPOGRAPHY

The district is the nearest seaside resort to London, and adjoins Southend-on-Sea. There is good road access to the district which is well connected to the county roads network and M25, and a direct rail link exists to London from Benfleet station. The district is a rapidly developing residential area with suitably located industrial sites. Extensive housing development has been carried out. 2,143 dwellings, 618 garages and 12 caravans are managed by the local authority including houses erected on Canvey Island for the overspill population of Barking and Waltham Forest. Practically the whole of the district has been sewered. Some 36 playing fields and open spaces are provided (1,201 acres). In addition, some 1,580 acres, mainly in Castle Point, have been scheduled as the Hadleigh Castle Countryside Park, which includes the Castle ruins. A nature sanctuary, 95 acres of which are in the district, has been preserved by agreement with other authorities. In addition, the Nature Conservancy has designated Hadleigh Ray, with its extensive marsh lands and saltings on either side, a site of special scientific interest and two other SSIs have been designated at Thundersley Common and Garrolds Meadow. Advances are made under the Housing Acts. Six health services clinics have been provided by the county council. The council owns eleven allotment sites. A number of caravan sites and a tent site on Canvey Island cater for holiday makers. Eight public halls are operated together with a swimming pool and complex at Waterside Farm, Canvey Island, which contains two swimming pools, a multi-purpose sports hall, squash courts, a trajectory hall, an all weather floodlit playing surface and other facilities including an 18 hole par 71 course, and facilities for soccer, rugby, hockey and cricket. An original Dutch cottage, reputed to have been built in the 17th century, belongs to the council, having been converted to a museum. The 1½ miles of beach controlled by the council provides bathing facilities, including tidal paddling/swimming pools, shops and kiosks. Boating facilities are provided by several boating and yacht clubs and moorings licensed by the council. An undulating private 18-hole golf course is situated at Boyce Hill. A pedestrianised shopping centre, the Knightswick Centre, is situated on Canvey Island.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough of Chelmsford covers an area of some 133 square miles and includes, along with the County Town, no less than twenty-five villages.

Chelmsford is a major administrative centre with the offices of the Borough Council, County Council, County Police Headquarters and the County Courts and Chelmsford Diocese all located within the town centre. The town has also been favoured with a number of insurance companies and financial institutions locating their headquarters in the town centre.

Its geography is gentle; "low hills, rich fields, calm rivers", though any cyclist will tell you that Danbury hill is very steep at 346 feet above sea level.

Highly efficient, intensive agriculture is still a main industry, though many more people are employed in the field of electronics, which Marconi cultivated here to such good effect and where other big companies like G.E.C. now have a stake.

With its excellent communications, good rail and road links; the A12, M11 and M25 are close by, Stansted Airport is only 15 miles away, Southend Airport the same distance and the East Coast ports of Harwich and Felixstowe within easy reach; Chelmsford really is the County Town at the heart of Essex.

The Cathedral at Chelmsford was raised from the status of a parish church in 1914. More than a score of parish churches whose buildings, monuments and records hide a history which traces habitation back through Saxon times to Roman occupation and to ancient Britain can be found here.

These ancient settlers found the place so much to their liking that they cleared the mighty, all-embracing forest to form their villages and fields. Today the place is just as popular and people pour into the new estates which have blossomed all round Chelmsford and in many villages. The new 'town in the country' is now growing at South Woodham Ferrers.

The Riverside Ice and Leisure Centre, Chelmsford caters for a wide range of activities. The major feature is a full size Ice Rink, built to competition standards. A large sports hall, fitness centre, squash courts, saunas, solarium and jacuzzi are included in the complex. A further attraction is the three heated swimming pools, including an outdoor free form pool. Riverside is located in Waterloo Lane.

There are many places to be enjoyed by the walker, cyclist or motorist via public footpaths and country promenades. From the old round-towered church at Great Leighs in the north to the variety of bird life on the placid waters of the great lake of the Hanningfield Reservoir in the south; from the unusually named Good Easter in the west to the east where Little Baddow clusters its cottages on the hill rising up from the river plain, there is much to delight the eye.

Places like Pleshey, Writtle, Margaretting and Great Waltham have gentle hills and watered vales, trees and fields which are the embodiment of that English countryside made famous by Constable's brush.

the source of the Thames four miles away. This position gives Cheltenham a mild but bright and sunny climate, peculiarly free from fogs and extremes of heat and cold. Cheltenham has many fine Regency houses and terraces. The very fine Pittville Pump Room has been completely restored.

It is both a residential and a holiday resort, providing all-the-year-round attractions, including symphony concerts and recitals by world-famous orchestras and artistes and dances on three or four occasions weekly. The Cheltenham International Festival of Music (two weeks in July) and the Cheltenham Festival of Literature (September or October or November) are now well established international annual festivals. In addition the following events take place each year: the Cheltenham Competitive Festival (May); West of England Ladies' Kennel Club Show (April); East Gloucestershire Tennis Tournament (July); Chelsea Building Society Parks Tennis Tournament (June); Cheltenham County Cricket Festival (July); Cheltenham National Hunt Festival (March); Cheltenham Festival of Christmas Lights (November to January). Cheltenham has also formed associations with the town of Annecy, France; City of Gottingen, Germany; the Soviet town of Sochi and Cheltenham, Pennsylvania, USA.

The Council owns approximately 167 acres of open space at Leckhampton Hill adjoining the borough and is joint owner with the Gloucester City Council of the Staverton Airport.

The Council has made provision for industries which are suitable to the character and situation of the town and there has been a very extensive development of light industry in and around the town (with the employment of large numbers of highly skilled workers) without in any way detracting from the other amenities for which Cheltenham is well known.

Cheltenham is a well-known educational and cultural centre with colleges and public schools, including a teachers' training college.

TOPOGRAPHY

Situated in north-east Oxfordshire the district is predominantly rural in character but approximately half the population is located in the urban areas of Banbury, Bicester, and Kidlington which lie in the north, east and south of the district respectively.

Banbury, a pleasant and ancient town of 38,588 inhabitants is the second largest in Oxfordshire and is the administrative centre of the Cherwell District. It stands in the north of the county on the Cherwell river and the Oxford Canal and is both a road and rail centre of importance. It skilfully combines, in its busy centre, the best of the old and the new—retaining its historic atmosphere yet keeping abreast of the times by encouraging modern industry, office and shopping development. It is the main market and shopping centre for a wide area and this aspect of the town has been greatly improved by the recent redevelopment of the town centre.

Bicester, an old market town, situated on the A41 trunk road, is rapidly expanding and now has a population of just over 18,800. Considerable industrial development has occurred and more is expected to follow.

Kidlington Parish lies just north of the City of Oxford, and, excluding Bicester, is the most populous of the 76 parishes in the district, most of the residential development having occurred since the 1939–45 War. Oxford Airport straddles the north-western boundary of the parish.

The whole area has many historical connections and comprises some of the most picturesque scenery in Oxfordshire.

Among the many attractions in the City are its ancient walls, the Cathedral, the River Dee, a flourishing regional shopping centre and many fine buildings of architectural and historic interest. TOPOGRAPHY

Chesterfield is an ancient borough situated on an eminence in the valley of the River Rother along which has always run one of the country's main arteries of communication. It is the chief town in the North East Derbyshire hundred of Scarsdale.

The Roman road from the south bears a pre-Roman name 'Rykneld Street' and the element 'Chester' implies Roman occupation. In the Middle Ages it was a substantial market town granted Charters by successive monarchs between 1200 and 1600. Renowned for the famous Parish Church, 'The Crooked Spire' which celebrated its 750th Anniversary in 1984.

As early as 1700 was foreshadowed the Industrial Revolution in the shape of coal mining and iron smelting. From that time the medieval features have been successively overlain by the progress of industrialisation which has also influenced the growth of Staveley. The Chesterfield Canal to the Trent was opened in 1777 and the Midland Railway in 1840. George Stephenson, the railway pioneer, lived at Tapton House from 1838 to 1848.

By 1900, Chesterfield was an important railway centre with three railway stations in the centre: the Midland, the Great Central and the Lancashire, Derbyshire and East Coast terminals. Until very recently the main road from Derby and Nottingham to Sheffield passed through the town. Some of the traffic now uses the M1 which runs through Staveley. Although industrialisation has influenced the district, particularly to the east, there still remain traces of medieval history in the centre. To the west lies, within five miles, the boundary of the Peak District National Park, the proximity of which, together with its accessibility by road and rail, justifies Chesterfield's claim to be a "Gateway to the Peak".

TOPOGRAPHY

Christchurch incorporates some rural areas but a considerable part of the borough comprises urban development. During the past two decades there has been a rapid growth of residential estates and this type of development is still proceeding.

There is some light industrial development within the district, mainly confined in two areas. Government experimental work is carried out at one establishment within the area.

The borough is a holiday resort with beaches at Highcliffe, Friars Cliff and Mudeford Sandbank—all under the control of the council which has provided beach chalets there. Stanpit Marsh which adjoins Christchurch Harbour is owned by the council, and although it has been declared a Site of Special Scientific Interest there is no restriction on public access. There are a number of recreation grounds and open spaces within the borough and the maintenance of many of these areas is undertaken by the council. The river frontages, Town Quay and Mudeford Quay are also maintained by the council which owns the Haven House Inn at Mudeford Quay.

The Two Riversmeat Leisure Centre was opened in 1987 and contains various recreational facilities, including a 25m 6-lane heated indoor swimming pool, badminton and squash courts, and is open to the public all year round. To the rear of the complex there is an 18 hole par 3 golf course overlooking Christchurch Harbour. This facility complements an existing 9 hole course at Iford Bridge.

TOPOGRAPHY

The area of the Borough includes the northerly and most pleasant part of Essex. Colchester is Britain's oldest recorded town and has a very long and interesting history. The Borough includes part of the famous Constable country bordering on Suffolk, large areas of pleasant countryside and a small coastal area Mersea Island. There are 32 Parish and Town Councils within the Borough.

The majority of the population is in the urban area of Colchester which is a substantial shopping and business centre. The town boasts many historic buildings and monuments, including its Castle, Roman Gateway and parts of the Roman Wall and the ruins of the Priory and Abbey.

The Borough has a diverse industrial and commercial base, examples of the major employers being N.E. Essex Health Authority, Anglian Coastal District British Telecom headquarters, Philips Business Systems headquarters, Royal London Assurance Co. Limited headquarters, Paxman Diesels and Woods Air Movement (both members of the G.E.C. Group) and Colchester Lathe Co. Ltd.

The Borough is also a centre for education. Essex University is located at Wivenhoe Park on the fringe of the urban area, Colchester Institute is a large technical college, again located on the edge of the town. Colchester Sixth Form College is a large new college located in the town centre.

Colchester has a direct rail link to London (Liverpool Street)—journey time approximately 55 minutes. The Borough is conveniently situated for the Haven Ports of Harwich and Felixstowe (25 miles to the east) and has ready access to Stansted Airport some 25 miles to the west.

Mayoral personal allowance: £2,900.

TOPOGRAPHY

The borough consists, in the main, of flat farming country which forms a typical part of the Cheshire plain. Across the northern and broadest part of the borough winds the River Dane and on this river, in the north-east corner, stands the town of Congleton. Down the eastern side extends the Macclesfield canal (a section of the 'Cheshire Ring') and a line of hills that reach beyond 1,000 feet in places and includes Mow Cop and near Congleton, The Cloud. Along this line of hills runs the Cheshire-Staffordshire boundary and at the southern end, where the town of Alsager is situated, the area familiarly known as The Potteries is very close by. The long western edge the River Wheelock, a valley shared by the Trent and Mersey Canal and with Alsager at one end, Middlewich at the other and Sandbach in the centre.

Often described as the 'Gateway to the North West' it is not surprising to find that Congleton is well served with lines of communication. The Borough is crossed by three rail routes—that from Crewe to Manchester cuts across the western part serving Sandbach, Holmes Chapel and Goostrey; the line from Stoke to Macclesfield and Manchester runs along the east side through Congleton whilst, in the extreme south, the Stoke to Crewe line serves Alsager. The M6 motorway, including a service area at Sandbach, cuts across the western half of the Borough with access points at both Sandbach (Junction 17) and Holmes Chapel (Junction 18) whilst the other parts of the area are traversed by good main roads with extensive bus and coach routes operated mainly by Cheshire Bus.

The Borough has a varied range of industries with new and traditional trades blending and with several industrial estates now well established. In general, the Borough Council maintains a full directory service of both sites and premises available for industrial purposes and will give every assistance possible in trying to meet developers requirements in terms of finding land and obtaining planning permission.

Recreation facilities are also well catered for with the Council itself operating Leisure Centres at Alsager, Congleton, Holmes Chapel and Sandbach and an 18 hole municipal golf course at Malkins Bank.

Mayoral annual allowance: £5,060 general, £2,380. Deputy Mayor: £740.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Copeland district includes many areas of great scenic beauty. Over two-thirds of the District lies within the Lake District National Park. It has a very extensive coastline reaching from Millom and the Duddon sands in the south to Whitehaven and some four miles beyond, in the north. The main road and rail communications extend along the coastal belt. The uncongested A66 provides a quick and easy link to the M6 and the national motorway network. The A590 links South Copeland with Kendal.

The District combines both agriculture and industry, coast and mountain scenery, superb natural beauty and areas of former industrial activity. The greatest concentration of population is in the far north where, in close proximity, are located the port and industrial town of Whitehaven and the smaller towns of Cleator Moor and Egremont, both former mining areas but sharing with the rest of this industrialised part of the District, a hinterland of farming country.

Whitehaven is the Borough's major town—the "Georgian Port beside the English Lakes", which once rivalled London and Bristol as a port and which retains many fine examples of Georgian architecture. The town's Georgian character has come to the fore in recent years, with a great deal of restoration work having been carried out. Modern developments include the Civic Halls complex in Lowther Street, the nearby Regional Sports Centre—and a swimming pool, all run by the Borough Council.

To the south extends the long coastal strip with the seaside villages of St. Bees, Seascale and Ravenglass and, at the extreme southern end, the town of Millom, with the developing holiday area of Haverigg nearby.

Inland are the thinly populated areas of moor, lake and mountain that form a part of the Lake District National Park. The mountains are cut into by the valleys of the Irt and the Esk and here are Wastwater (England's deepest lake) and Ennerdale Water, two of the lesser known lakes but ones of great natural beauty. The Ennerdale

Mayoral annual allowance: £1,800.

TOPOGRAPHY

The District covers the southern part of the Yorkshire Dales National Park, the upper parts of Airedale, Wharfedale and Ribblesdale, and takes in the Wenning Valley near Bentham.

The District was formed by the amalgamation of the former Urban District of Skipton, the greater part of the Rural District of Skipton, and the Rural District of Settle. In February, 1983, the Parish of Kildwick became part of the District, after previously having been administered by the City of Bradford Metropolitan Council.

Skipton itself is a market town, a focal point of trunk roads and a natural shopping centre for a large rural area. The northern and western bypasses were opened in 1982 to ease traffic congestion in the town centre. The District is mainly agricultural (cattle rearing, milk and sheep) but industry is encouraged, particularly in Skipton and the larger towns and villages.

Much of the District is situated within the most beautiful part of the Yorkshire Dales National Park. Features of the District are Barden Tower, Bolton Abbey, Skipton Castle, Malham Cove, pot holes, caves, waterfalls, the three peaks of Wharfedale, Ingleborough and Pen-y-ghent and part of the scenic Settle to Carlisle Railway.

The Council owns the Aireville Estate, Skipton, of which 27½ acres are open to the public as a natural park, and includes covered swimming baths with health suite, tennis courts, a pitch and putt course and a putting green. The Council's museum contains a rare collection of prehistoric remains from Upper Wharfedale, excavated remains from the Roman Camp at Elslack, and a very rare

Brigantian Iron Age Sword found at Flasby, near Skipton.

Twinning. Dorsten (W. Germany).

TOPOGRAPHY

The new district came into being on 1st April 1974 as a result of local government reorganisation. It comprises the whole of the former Crawley UD area, a small part of the former Cuckfield RD, and part of Dorking and Horley RD. Borough status was granted from the same date. Substantially, it covers the designated area of the new town and includes Gatwick Airport.

The former Crawley Urban District Council was created from part of Horsham Rural District in 1956 following logically upon the development of Crawley under the New Towns Act, 1946.

On April 1st, 1978, the Council inherited all of the housing and housing related assets of the Commission for the New Town in Crawley. This transfer was achieved on the basis of the Borough Council accepting responsibility for the outstanding loan debt incurred by the Commission for the New Towns and its predecessor, the Crawley Development Corporation.

MUNICIPAL YEAR BOOK

The housing related assets amount to Neighbourhood Shopping Parades and other similar properties.

The Council's own housing development programme will continue subject to Central Government decree. 1988 saw the start of the development of Maidenbower, Crawley's newest neighbourhood.

Several parks, many playing fields and allotment sites were provided by the former urban district council and this generous standard of provision is being continued in new developments. Permanent sports pavilions have been constructed on 15 of the playing fields. There are ten permanent playcentres and 4 permanent adventure playgrounds, run by the Playleadership Scheme.

The Crawley Sportcentre opened in 1974 has been extended to cater for other entertainment, and is now known as the Crawley Leisure Centre.

In addition to a wide range of athletics and sporting activities the centre also caters for major events of a national/international nature. The complex includes an all-purpose sports hall, a 400 m international running track and field event arena with grandstand, floodlit all-seasons games area, indoor swimming pools, and ample parking.

In 1982, the Council opened a second leisure centre in Bewbush. An 18 hole municipal golf course has become part of the excellent amenities provided by Tilgate Park along with the popular Nature and Rare Breeds Survival Centre.

A new Theatre/Arts Centre called The Hawth, was opened in April 1988 and has excellent facilities including stage, studios, orchestra pit, rehearsal room and restaurants.

TOPOGRAPHY

Crewe is a thriving modern industrial town set in the heart of the beautiful South Cheshire countryside. The town centre has been extensively redeveloped over recent years, the latest addition being the Market Centre complex incorporating a large indoor shopping arcade, 33 new shop units and an extension to a large departmental store. A policy of free parking is an incentive to commuting shoppers.

The Victoria Community Centre, which was developed in conjunction with the Department of Education and Science and Cheshire County Council is tremendously successful in combining educational, community and sporting facilities including a 7-lane all-weather synthetic track and pavilion at the Cumberland Sports Centre which is capable of taking National Standard Athletic events. Amongst the many other superb sporting facilities in the Borough is the Camm Street Gymnastics Centre and a Soccer Excellence Centre adjacent to the Crewe Alexandra Football Ground for community use. A PGA Championship Golf Course is planned for Weston, south of Crewe.

Crewe's delightful Edwardian Theatre, The Lyceum, provides a host of variety and entertainment all year round.

Further improvements in central Crewe include town centre pedestrianisation, several General Improvement Areas, the restoration of four streets of railway cottages and the reclamation of 50 acres of what was formerly the railway ash tip. Part of the reclaimed land has been transformed into an informal park adjacent to the town's showpiece, Queen's Park and a 9-hole pay as you play golf course.

Crewe is rapidly developing as one of the leading business centres in the North West and already plays host to such famous names as Rolls Royce Motors, British Rail Engineering, The Wellcome Foundation, Chester Barrie, Morning Foods, NMW Computers and many others who are leaders in their field. The Council's 100 acre Crewe Gates Farm Industrial Estate is virtually full and there has been substantial private sector investment in the provision of factory units.

Confidence in Crewe and Nantwich's economic future is seen in the development of the new 87 acre Crewe Business Park which is providing high quality, low density sites to attract high technology industry into the Borough. The Business Park is being developed jointly by the Borough Council and Cheshire County Council.

A Joint Venture Company has been formed with Bovis Urban Renewal Ltd. to promote economic development in the Borough. With its strategic position in the railway network Crewe will benefit from the opening of the Channel Tunnel in 1993. A key role for Crewe is proposed in British Rail's plans for international passenger and freight services through the Channel Tunnel.

Tourism is becoming an increasingly important activity particularly in Nantwich which is a beautiful market town within an outstanding conservation area with a wealth of Elizabethan half-timbered Georgian and Tudor buildings. Over 130 buildings are listed as being of architectural and/or historical importance including the 14th century Parish Church, Sweetbriar Hall, Church's Mansion, The Cheshire Cat and The Crown Hotel. The rural area, famous for its Cheshire Cheese and attested Friesian herds contains many picturesque villages, several of which are conservation areas. The area has enjoyed a rich and turbulent history, most notably during the Civil War, which is commemorated each year on Holly Holy Day with the re-enactment of the Battle of Nantwich 25th January 1644.

The South Cheshire Tourism Development Association is actively marketing the area to increase the potential for growth in tourism. South Cheshire's potential for tourism is being exploited by a 3 year Tourism Action Programme. The whole of the Borough is most attractive. This has been recognised by the North West Tourist Board whose judges have regularly named the towns of Crewe and Nantwich and various villages in the Borough as winners of the regional heat of the annual Britain in Bloom competition. In 1985, Crewe was judged as the best large floral town in the UK and Nantwich has also gained honours at national level.

The Borough Council developed a new major tourist attraction to mark the 150th Anniversary of the Railways coming to Crewe, (4th July 1837) The Crewe Heritage Centre opened by Her Majesty the Queen, contains a major exhibition hall, a working signal box and facilities to accommodate and display historic steam locomotives. The station is the starting point for regular steam train services during the summer tourist season.

TOPOGRAPHY

The borough includes the areas of the former county borough and the Darlington Rural District with the exception of Great Aycliffe Parish containing part of Aycliffe new town. It lies at the southern extremity of Durham County and its southern boundary is formed by the River Tees with North Yorkshire to the south and the Stockton District of Cleveland County to the east. The borough's administrative centre is based at the Town Hall which was opened in 1970 and serves a population of approximately 100,000. The town has a long history probably best known as a 'railway town' and has various industries including iron and steel, heavy engineering and textiles. More recently it has developed a range of lighter industries, and as a result its employment situation has remained reasonably static despite the closure in the mid-60s of its once large and important railway works. The council having made land available for industrial estates. Darlington is also an important shopping and market town as well as a transportation centre by road, rail and air, viz. the main London-Newcastle-Edinburgh Railway Line and the A1(M) Motorway in addition to Tees-side Airport which is located at the eastern boundary of the district.

Housing, which remains a function of the borough council, is popular and pleasant. In the central area, the borough council has undertaken the rehabilitation of a number of historic commercial buildings and has constructed a comprehensive leisure facility—the Dolphin Centre. The inner ring road is substantially complete; the final section is due for construction after 1990.

Surrounding the district is rural, open and attractive farming country with villages of character, some of which are subject to conservation area policy, and some of which have developed as commuter villages in recent years.

Mayoral annual allowance: £7,190.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough is situated between the North Downs and the Thames, the northerly part being predominantly industrial and residential, and the southerly part mainly rural in character. The main industries include engineering and the manufacture of pharmaceuticals, and where chalk excavation has taken place great emphasis is laid upon restoration by means of infilling and landscaping schemes.

Dartford is an old market town connected in history with Wat Tyler's Rebellion in 1381. It is situated about 15 miles east of London and from the town centre the land rises sharply to the residential districts in the east and west. The town is by-passed by the A2 trunk road which links via the M25 motorway with the M20 and Dartford Tunnel under the Thames. The Dartford Bridge over the river is being constructed to improve further the traffic movement between Kent and Essex.

To the south of the town lie the beautiful and very ancient parishes of Darenth, Bean, Longfield and New Barn, Southfleet, Stone and Sutton-at-Hone & Hawley, with Wilmington in the south-west and Swanscombe and Greenhithe in the east. Each has its own particular link with early English history, evidence of which can be seen in the many fine churches and old buildings which remain. Besides the natural beauty of the rural area there is Central Park in Dartford town centre—approximately 27 acres, and to the east of the town Hesketh Park of 10 acres. This smaller park provides excellent facilities for tennis, bowls, hockey, and cricket. Dartford Heath with 340 acres of open heath land, provides a fine natural open space with cricket and football pitches for public use. Fairfield Pool is a family sports complex close to the town centre, and at Stone Lodge—2 miles east of the town—there is a farm park and steam railway attracting over 100,000 visitors a year. Fanta Seas, a 'Water World' complex, also occupies the site and there are plans for an adjoining theme museum. Also at Stone Lodge is an indoor bowls centre and an international standard rifle range. The Orchard – a multi-purpose theatre complex – opened in 1982. This Borough Council enterprise is the premier touring theatre of the south-east, playing host to well-known stage and TV stars and producing the full range of entertainment – from opera and plays to films and wrestling.

Three branches of the railway network have their junction at Dartford and there are other stations at Farningham Road, Stone, Greenhithe and Swanscombe. The Dartford International Ferry Terminal – opened in 1986 – now operates a roll-on roll-off service to Belgium and Denmark. Other services to Europe are planned in the near future. Dartford Borough Council, as a member of the London Port Promotion Association, is very active in promoting the area in Europe. In March 1988 an Economic Accord was signed with Dunkerque to promote co-operation on economic issues, including industrial development, tourism and cultural exchange. A similar link was made with Hanau in April 1989. Housing associations are providing new accommodation for some families. A major town centre retail development opened in the Summer of 1989—a joint project between the Council and the Burton Property Trust—and the whole area is being redeveloped on a massive scale.

Mayor's annual allowance and other expenses: £16,050.

TOPOGRAPHY

Derby's history can be traced back to the first century AD, when the Romans established the fortified camp of Derwentio. The settlement was occupied by the Danes in the ninth century, and became a garrison town bearing the Danish name Deoraby. The Domesday book contained a detailed record of the town, showing it to be of some importance. It had been a royal borough long before the Norman conquest. Numerous charters were granted to the burgesses, the earliest known being that granted by Henry II (1154), which confirmed laws and customs already enjoyed, notably the right to hold a market. In 1446, Henry VI granted the right to appoint a recorder for the borough, and following the grant of a charter by Charles I in 1638, the first Mayor took office. In 1745, Bonnie Prince Charlie's army advanced into the town, which was the turning point of the '45 Rebellion. The first railway was opened in 1839, the town subsequently becoming one of the principal industrial centres of the Midlands. It was created a county borough in 1888, the boundaries being considerably extended on 1st April 1968 under the terms of the Derby Order 1968. In 1977 Her Majesty the Queen, in commemoration of her Silver Jubilee, conferred upon Derby the status of a city.

The City owns a central omnibus station, golf courses, 1,630 acres of parks and recreation grounds, four industrial trading estates, and a number of nursery industrial units. There is also a direct labour department for building work. Within the last decade the central area of the city has been enhanced by the construction of the Eagle Centre shopping precinct and covered market, the adjoining new Derby Playhouse theatre, and the Assembly Rooms in the Market Place.

TOPOGRAPHY

Derwentside, a district with a history of coalmining and steel production which ten years ago was dominated by the former Consett Steelworks, is now semi-rural with part of the national park area of outstanding natural beauty lying in its boundaries. Land height varies from about 200 ft. at the lowest point near the River Derwent to nearly 1,700 ft. high on the moorlands.

The Council's recent policies have created a new environment in which industry, tourism and commerce are now flourishing in a mixed and robust local economy.

Situated close to the A1(M) on the east and with the A68 passing through the western part of the district, Derwentside is provided with two major traffic routes giving good road communications with north and south. For those who prefer the speed of air travel, services are available from Newcastle Airport to London and other major British and European Airports.

The good communications and excellent quality of life have assisted the Council in attracting 200 companies to Derwentside, creating over 4,500 jobs in the district since the steelworks closure.

The Council's latest scheme is a partnership with the private sector to redevelop the 700 acre reclaimed site of the former Consett Steelworks. An agreement in principle has been reached to produce an integrated ecologically sound project to create 1,300 jobs, which will involve alternative energy sources; buildings designed for energy conservation; habitat creation; and industries based on recycling.

TOPOGRAPHY

The District contains significant contrasts from the quiet rural villages to the town of Dover, the busiest passenger and roll on/roll off port in the world. The countryside behind the famous White Cliffs is rolling chalk downland supporting orchards as well as sheep rearing, whilst in the Northern part of the District there is intensive horticulture. There are also significant modern industries such as drug research and manufacture at Sandwich and electronics at Dover.

Sandwich and Dover are both Cinque Ports and the attractive seaside resort of Deal is also a member of the Cinque Ports Confederation as a Limb of Sandwich. The District contains many points of historic interest including the spectacular Norman Castle of Dover, the Tudor Castles of Deal and Walmer, the latter being a residence of the Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, and the Roman Castle at Richborough as well as the recently excavated Roman Painted House at Dover. Sandwich is noted for its medieval buildings and street plan and Deal for its Georgian seafront.

The District is famous for its golf courses, including the Royal St. Georges and Princes at Sandwich, the Royal Cinque Ports at Deal and the Walmer and Kingsdown Golf Clubs. The Royal St. Georges is host to the British Open Championship. Deal is well known for sea angling.

The Kent Coalfield lies within the District boundary and together with the Port of Dover and agriculture provide the major sources of employment.

TOPOGRAPHY

Easington District, which covers an area of approximately 55 square miles, is the most easterly of the eight districts of County Durham, situated on the coast between Sunderland, in the County of Tyne and Wear to the north and Hartlepool, in Cleveland County to the south. To the west it is bordered by Durham and Sedgfield Districts of County Durham. The District has a dispersed settlement pattern and a population of about 100,000, which has been slowly declining since the early sixties. It contains two medium sized towns—the harbour and mining town of Seaham in the north and the New Town of Peterlee in the centre, almost a dozen substantial mining or ex-mining villages and a number of smaller villages which retain the rural character of the area.

The District is an important coal mining area and in spite of some recent diversification in the area's employment structure, the National Coal Board is still by far the largest single employer at centres along the coast and in the northern half of the District. The dual carriageway A19 Trunk Road runs north-south through the centre of the District providing a first class link with both Wearside/Tyneside and Teesside.

TOPOGRAPHY

Eastbourne is one of Britain's sunniest mainland resorts and is sheltered by the magnificent 575ft Beachy Head. The Borough covers an area of some 11,300 acres—4,095 of which are Downland and which include four council-owned farms. The council's policy of Downland preservation contributes significantly to the amenities of the town, and the area is designated an area of outstanding natural beauty.

Eastbourne also embraces eight miles of fine coastline, with an elegant, uncommercialised promenade and many attractive hotels and guest houses. The resort's gardens are internationally famous and have won both the Britain in Bloom and Entente Florale contests.

The Sovereign Centre incorporates a fun pool and multi-use hall with catering and bar facilities. Children's play facilities are provided in the Treasure Island play centre, and Fort Fun.

The town has two indoor sports centres. One, the SASH Hall at Hampden Park, was built in conjunction with the Sports Council and the County Council. The grass tennis courts at Devonshire Park are considered second only to Wimbledon and play host to many international contests, including the ladies international pre-Wimbledon Championships in June. The calendar of events and attractions in Eastbourne also includes bowls, county cricket, regattas and flower shows.

The council owns four theatres: the 1700-seat Congress, the Winter Garden, the Royal Hippodrome and the Devonshire Park, a delightful building opened in 1884. International performers, including ballet and opera companies, orchestras and individual artistes appear in Eastbourne year-round.

With continuing private and local authority housing development, the population of Eastbourne is 80,700 (mid-1986). There are excellent commercial and light industrial sites, and there are proposals to create a 2 sq mile park in the heart of the town to provide conservation, recreation and tourism facilities, as well as some new, high-quality commercial development. For shopping, the Arndale Centre adjoining the Terminus Road shopping precinct provides over 65 shop units, together with a public house and multi-storey car park for 750 vehicles.

Mayoral annual allowance £3,800.

TOPOGRAPHY

East Dorset District forms the eastern section of the County of Dorset, adjoining the Counties of Hampshire in the east and Wiltshire in the north. Located to the immediate north of the South Coast resort of Bournemouth, Poole and Christchurch, the District affords easy access to the Isle of Purbeck and the New Forest.

The District is one of contrasts. Large residential areas have developed around Ferndown, Verwood and the historic town of Wimborne Minster in the southern parts of the District, while the remainder comprises agricultural and woodland with villages interspersed.

Scenery is varied, between the chalk downland in the north, now forming part of the Cranborne Chase A.O.N.B. and the sandy heathlands of important nature conservation interest, in the south.

The District falls within two Parliamentary Constituencies North Dorset and Christchurch and is in the Diocese of Salisbury.

TOPOGRAPHY

East Hampshire, as its name implies, occupies the east of the County. Covering an area of some 200 square miles, the District extends from Alton in the north to Rowlands Castle in the south—a distance of some 30 miles between boundaries.

The District is essentially rural in character. The main centres of population are Alton (16,443), Petersfield (12,751), Horndean (12,219) and Whitehill/Bordon (14,478) with the remainder of the District's 104,834 residents living in villages and hamlets.

The District contains some of the most attractive countryside in Hampshire—even in the centre of Alton and Petersfield one is only minutes away from open fields or woodland. Farming is an important contributor to the local economy.

Communications within and beyond the District are good. Rail links are available to London from Alton and Bentley, and to London and the south coast from Liphook, Liss, Petersfield and Rowlands Castle. The following main roads cross the District: A31, A339, A32, A272, A3/A3(M). Connections to the M3 and M27 are relatively close by.

East Hampshire provides many excellent opportunities for small-scale employment development. The District has a thriving and varied local employment base. Major employers include the breweries in Alton and Horndean, Dan Air workshops at Lasham and perfume and toiletry products at Petersfield. There are a number of military camps and installations in the District which bring further trade and employment for local people.

The main aim of planning policies for the District is the protection and conservation of the area. Within this general aim there is scope for small-scale developments to further diversify and strengthen the local economy. At the present time land is available for industrial development at Alton, Petersfield, Bordon and Horndean. The site at Bordon (Woolmer Trading Estate) is owned and managed by the District Council—Chris Fairhead (0730 66551 extension 326) will be pleased to give further information about the site.

The South East Hampshire Area Enterprise acts as the focus for enquiries about employment development opportunities (contact Mr Addison on Alton 87577). The District Council publishes a bi-monthly "Register of Industrial and Commercial Property in East Hampshire" (contact Pat Baker on 0730 66551 extension 253) and is a member of HELP (Hampshire Employment Land and Premises Register).

TOPOGRAPHY

Within this largely rural area of rich farmland, set in undulating country and river valleys, are several historic towns within easy commuting distance of London but far removed from the noise and bustle of the metropolis. There are many picturesque villages with thatched cottages, medieval manor houses and ancient churches. Evidence remains of the Saxon, Danish and Roman occupations.

Good shopping facilities are offered to town residents and their country neighbours and modern buildings are well integrated with fine Conservation Areas.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough of Eastleigh lies between Southampton Water, the River Hamble and the borders of Winchester and Test Valley. It is within a rapidly developing area of South Hampshire and a popular location for industrial and residential development.

The largely Victorian town of Eastleigh is the administrative centre of the Borough and is currently undergoing major redevelopment. The Swan Centre, a £30m shopping development opened recently.

While the town is commonly associated with the railway and engineering industries the Council's policy to encourage the diversification of employment has led to industry and commerce becoming more broadly based. The bulk of Eastleigh's industrial development has been located within trading estates throughout the Borough and more recently commerce too has been accommodated on business parks. These may be found at Chandlers Ford, Eastleigh, Netley and at new sites alongside the M27 at Hedge End.

Residential development continues to take place but there are considerable recreation and leisure facilities within the Borough. Marinas and Sailing Clubs are found at Hamble, Bursledon and Netley along the River Hamble and Southampton Water. Three large Country Parks allow public access to some of South Hampshire's finest countryside and a number of informal countryside areas are provided and managed by the Borough Council. Sports facilities including a comprehensive Leisure Centre and Golf Course are located at Fleming Park, Eastleigh and arrangements are made with the local education authority for public use of school facilities at Wildern, Hedge End.

The Borough has excellent transport links. It is at the intersection of the M27 and A33, has two stations on the main London to Bournemouth railway line and has Eastleigh/Southampton Airport within its boundaries. The ports of Southampton and Portsmouth are nearby.

Despite almost continual growth the Borough Council has an active policy of conservation. The attractive villages of Bishopstoke, Botley, Hamble, Netley and Bursledon have all been incorporated within Conservation Areas.

Superannuation Scheme administered by Lincolnshire CC.

Audit by District Auditor (No. 11 Audit District).

Twinnings. Louth: La Ferte Bernard (France). Old Bolingbroke: Bolingbrook (USA). Skegness: Bad Gandersheim (W. Germany).

TOPOGRAPHY

The district is characteristically rural, and is intensively cultivated in the chalk Wolds, the coastal marshlands and the fens of the Witham Valley. Small scale industrial development has been encouraged in the small towns and large villages of Louth, Horncastle, Spilsby, Alford, Mablethorpe, Skegness, Wainfleet, Coningsby and Tattershall Thorpe, but the towns retain their characteristics as active market centres.

Along the coast, tourism is of great importance. The extensive sand beaches attract many holidaymakers, particularly from the East Midlands, and the whole coastline between Skegness and Mablethorpe caters for the tourist trade. Gibraltar Point, a Nature Reserve to the south of Skegness, is a particular attraction for many people.

Inland, the district has considerable historic interest: East Lindsey experienced settlement by the Romans (Horncastle was a Roman Town), by the Saxons and most notably by the Danes, who have left their mark on the place names of the district, names such as Hemingby, Scamblesby, Goulceby, Driby, Calceby, Swaby, and so on. There are a variety of historic buildings, including Louth Park Abbey and Kirkstead Abbey; Bolingbroke Castle, associated with John of Gaunt and King Henry IV, and Tattershall Castle. The National Trust owns Tattershall Castle, and also Gunby Hall, near Burgh-le-Marsh. Restored windmills are to be found at Alford and Burgh-le-Marsh, and there is a splendid manor house at Alford which is open to the public.

The Wolds, a substantial part of which are within East Lindsey, provide some attractive scenery and were recently designated as an Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty. A number of towns and villages have pleasant conservation areas; these include Louth, Horncastle, Alford, Spilsby, Burgh-le-Marsh and Wainfleet.

Sporting facilities are many. Stock Car and Motor Cycle Racing take place at Cadwell Park near Louth, and the district's rivers provide good fishing. There are golf courses at Louth, Skegness, Sutton and Woodhall Spa, and tennis courts in all the towns, notably along the coast. There are recreational flying fields near Alford and Coningsby, and water sports facilities are available at Covenham Reservoir.

TOPOGRAPHY

East Northamptonshire is a large district with a group of 4 manufacturing towns at its southern end, 2 small market towns and over 50 villages are spread throughout the remainder of the quiet, pleasant countryside.

The towns of Rushden, Higham Ferrers, Irthlingborough and Raunds grew as a result of the development of the leather tanning and shoe manufacturing trades, but the District's industry is becoming increasingly diversified including light manufacturing and service industries. The market towns of Thrapston and Oundle act as service centres for the surrounding agricultural areas. The villages of East Northamptonshire are characterised by fine stone-built properties, often with a fine church or an impressive country house.

The towns of Oundle and Higham Ferrers are currently both benefiting from Historic Town Schemes, and with a total of 20 conservation areas the Council pursues policies of encouraging the retention of all that is best in the environment.

The District's most notable natural feature is the River Nene, which meanders through the length of East Northamptonshire offering opportunities for recreation including boating and bird watching. Tourism is being actively encouraged and a number of new hotels have recently been developed.

The Council has a Sports Centre at Rushden and a new swimming pool is being constructed at Rushden (opening November 1990).

Part of the District is within a Business Improvement Services Area (European Grants to help small businesses) and a further part has been designated as a Rural Development Area where the Government is making financial incentives available for industrial and tourist projects.

East Northamptonshire is an expanding district and property values are rising as the district becomes absorbed within the south east commuter area. The opening of new roads, especially the A1-M1 link road is causing pressure for further development and growth.

Agencies. The following functions are carried out by the borough council on an agency basis: county council functions—Highways, Noise Insulation; regional water authority functions—Sewerage.

Twining: Reutlingen (W. Germany).

TOPOGRAPHY

The borough extends from the Mersey to the Dee at the south-western end of the Wirral peninsula. The Borough Council provides the full range of services allocated by the Local Government Act, 1972, and is also responsible for the maintenance of roads in the borough other than trunk roads and motorways, under agency arrangements with the Cheshire County Council and sewerage under agency arrangements with the water authorities. Among the facilities available in the district are an all-purpose Civic Hall, a sports stadium, two leisure centres (both with indoor swimming pools), eight community centres and an 18-hole municipal golf course.

The district is a major industrial centre which has largely been developed in the post-war period. Major national and multinational companies have chosen Ellesmere Port as their base for development and expansion. For example, the Shell Group's continued investment in their plant has made their Stanlow Refinery and petrochemical works the most complex of such sites in Europe. More recently, Vauxhall Motors Limited has decided to make significant further investments in the company's local plant.

Nevertheless, this intense industrial activity is counterbalanced by a large part of the district which is rural/agricultural in land use and which includes a number of pleasant country villages, a vital sector of the West Cheshire Green Belt and an extensive section of the Wirral Country Park.

Mayoral annual allowance: £2,140.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough of Elmbridge comprises the parishes or townships of Claygate, Cobham, East and West Molesey, Esher, Hersham, Hinchley Wood, Long Ditton and Thames Ditton, Oatlands, Oxshott, Stoke D'Abernon, Walton-on-Thames and Weybridge and is situated approximately 17 miles South West of London. Bordered by the River Thames on its northern boundary, the Borough's area nearly coincides with the Saxon administrative Hundred of Elmbridge. The name, originally 'Emleybridge' derives from the river Mole, formerly the Emlin, which runs through the middle of the borough.

The borough is mainly residential, though the southern part of the area can be said to be rural in character. There are a number of shopping centres, including the towns of Esher, Walton and Weybridge, surrounded by high-class properties.

The Council owns almost all the extensive common land in the district. The Commons serve to separate the residential enclaves in the Green Belt, and maintain the reputation of the borough as a highly desirable residential area within easy reach of London by rail and car. Waterloo is a few minutes railway journey from Esher and Walton and Weybridge Stations on the main London and Southern region lines and the Guildford railway line runs along the eastern part of the district, serving the residential areas of Hinchley Wood, Claygate, Oxshott, Stoke and Cobham, also giving a direct service to Waterloo. There are extensive recreational facilities, catering for, among other sports, bowls, tennis, hockey, cricket and football. The Council owns the Upper Deck Open-Air Swimming Pool on the bank of the River Thames, opposite Hampton Court Palace, and an indoor swimming pool at Walton-on-Thames. In addition, a multi-purpose Sports and Leisure Centre stands alongside the Thames at Walton. The National Trust property, Claremont Landscape Garden, near Esher and Sandown Park race course attract large numbers of visitors during the year. Elmbridge Borough Council acquired some 160 acres of the famous Painshill Park, Cobham, one of the first and finest landscape parks created in the 18th century by the Hon. Charles Hamilton. The Painshill Park Trust, a registered charity, was formed in 1981 with the aim of raising funds, restoring the Park and opening it to the public so that visitors may be able to enjoy Charles Hamilton's "Garden of Earthly Delights". Bathing, boating and fishing facilities are available on the Rivers Thames and Wey, and a number of golf clubs are situated within the borough.

TOPOGRAPHY

Epping Forest District comprises 133 square miles extending out fan-shaped from the edge of Greater London; north along the Lea Valley and the long leafy length of Epping Forest; onwards as far as the River Stort and the town of Harlow and north-east along the Roding Valley into the very heart of rural Essex.

It is a District that spans town and country and contrasts busy shop-lined streets in the commuter belt suburbs with country lanes linking peaceful hamlets. It sets productive industrial areas against areas of glasshouses and some of the largest and most productive farms in Essex; its people live in large community estates, leafy country towns, villages or isolated rural dwellings. A district with contrasting landscapes and life styles.

The commuter towns of Chigwell, Loughton and Buckhurst Hill lie along the southern boundary with Greater London. On the west are the old streets and new factories of Waltham Abbey, the long green acres and lakes of the Lea Valley Regional Park and the market gardens, nurseries and gravel pits of Roydon and Nazeing. To the east lie the village of Theydon Bois and the country towns of Epping and Ongar, all served by London underground. Beyond and circling round from the north to the east are the cottages and greens of the Roding Valley villages with fertile farmlands in between.

TOPOGRAPHY

Epsom and Ewell lies at the foot of the North Downs 15 miles south-west of London on the main road to Worthing and with excellent road and railway communications.

A considerable proportion of Epsom and Ewell consists of green belt and public open space which will be protected from future development. It has always been the Borough Council's policy to preserve the green belt and open spaces which form such an important part of the Borough, and the continuation of this policy will ensure that the character of the town is not affected.

Although many of the residents of the Borough travel to and from their work in London, Epsom and Ewell is nevertheless an independent local government unit which maintains and enjoys its own traditions and interest. The town has grown slowly with much variety of design both in dwellings and public buildings, and with due regard to the harmony of new estates and commercial premises with the architecture of the old village centres.

Epsom town centre has been revitalised by the completion of the Ashley Centre comprising shops, offices, a multi-storey car park and the Epsom Playhouse theatre which is managed by the Borough Council.

Epsom and Walton Downs, the site of the famous Epsom racecourse, are controlled by Conservators (on which the Council has the majority representation) appointed in pursuance of the Epsom and Walton Downs Regulation Act, 1984. Nonsuch Park, an open space of some 300 acres, is managed by a joint management committee consisting of representatives of the Epsom and Ewell Borough Council and the London Borough of Sutton.

TOPOGRAPHY

The Borough is predominantly urban in character. Its population is centred mainly in the townships of Ilkeston, Long Eaton and Sandiacre which are situated in the lower Erewash valley, but its boundaries extend westwards to the City of Derby to include open countryside and pleasant villages.

The coalmining and lace industries have now declined, and the local economy is now based largely on engineering, and the manufacture of textiles and furniture. The Borough Council is active in promoting industrial and commercial development and has helped to secure the economic stability of the area.

Erewash is well served by communications. The M1 motorway passes through the Borough and the East Midlands Airport is three miles from the southern boundary.

The Borough Council offers a wide range of leisure facilities including two modern swimming pools, a sports centre, a 9-hole Golf Course at Ilkeston and a number of parks and open spaces including the extensive and notable West Park at Long Eaton. Leisure centres are proposed for Long Eaton, and at Ilkeston where a major town centre shopping scheme is also planned. Trent Lock at Long Eaton is an important canal cruising centre. A local history museum was recently opened in Ilkeston.

Erewash is situated close to the major centres of Nottingham, Leicester and Derby and within easy reach of the Peak District, Charnwood Forest and the Dukeries.

TOPOGRAPHY

Exeter is the county town of Devon and geographically well situated as a focal point for major roads, railways and air services.

The City history dates from AD 50–55 when as Isca Dumnoniorum it became the administrative centre for Devon and Cornwall. It is a city by Royal charter granted by Henry II and the first recorded reference to the Mayor dates from 1202. The city claims to be the senior mayoralty in the Country.

The Guildhall, dating from 1160 and still in use as a council chamber, is probably the oldest municipal building. The Cathedral is one of the best examples of ornate Gothic in the country with a superb setting of historic buildings and a lawned close. The shopping centre is extensive and there is representation by most national retailers in a virtually traffic free environment. Considerable efforts are being made to enhance many of the historic streets with environmental improvements.

The two main industrial sites are at Marsh Barton and Sowton. Marsh Barton with some 250 acres is now virtually complete and is being extended by approximately 60 acres as the Matford Business Park. Sowton is jointly owned with the County Council and immediately abuts the M5 motorway.

The city has a major university with Faculties in Arts, Science, Engineering, Social Studies, Law and Education, and approximately 5,000 students, and Exeter College which serves the regional area and provides sixth form education.

The M5 motorway bypasses the city and there are excellent communications with the rest of the country by road and from British Rail HS 125 services and Exeter Airport some 5 miles from the Town Centre.

The city is a good tourist centre within easy reach of the sea, Dartmoor and Exmoor National Parks.

The Council is the Port Authority with the Port of Exeter extending from the River Axe to the River Teign. It also maintains the oldest ship canal in the country approximately 5 miles long, the construction of which commenced in 1539. The whole riverside and basin area is being comprehensively developed as a major tourist centre. It is proposed to maintain and develop the canal as an amenity waterway as part of a scheme to open up the canal and river as amenity areas. The area includes a unique maritime museum. The Council owns many valuable properties and extensive land.

The Mayor has an expense allowance of £7,420 per annum and an official car with chauffeur is provided.

TOPOGRAPHY

Fareham lies on the south coast between the cities of Southampton and Portsmouth. It comprises the town of Fareham and a number of outlying former villages, most of which have been substantially developed by housing in the inter and post war years. Although the central part of the Borough is largely built-up, there are extensive areas of open countryside in the north and along the Solent coastline.

The town is an important shopping centre serving a wide area. Part of its shopping facilities is provided by a covered and air-conditioned development forming an element of a major town centre scheme which includes also a 930 seat public hall, a library, health centre, and civic offices.

The Borough's entertainment and recreational facilities include an entertainment centre, leisure centre, extensive parks, sports grounds with sailing based on Fareham Creek and the River Hamble.

The South Hampshire Structure Plan identifies Fareham as a major growth area, and an adopted action area plan allocates substantial areas in the west of the Borough for new housing and industrial development. Other major industrial estates have been developed in the eastern part of the Borough.

The Borough has long associations with the Royal Navy and a long tradition of boatbuilding, and, despite being an area of development, has many areas of historic and architectural value. There are eight designated Conservation Areas including Titchfield and Portchester, which are based on attractive historic villages, and the Georgian Fareham High Street.

The town has good road and rail communications to the surrounding area and other parts of the Country. The M27, part of the South Coast Trunk Road, runs east-west through the Borough.

TOPOGRAPHY

Fenland, which forms the greater part of the former Isle of Ely, extends from the market town of Chatteris in the south to the Port of Wisbech in the north, borders upon Greater Peterborough in the west and Norfolk in the east. The District is one of contrasts, historic market towns, picturesque villages, light industrial development, vast open countryside, Regency houses, great churches, National Trust estates, large syndicate farms, rivers and waterways. With its peat and silt soil, the District is the most fertile in the United Kingdom and amongst the most intensely cropped and productive in the world. Industries are in the main associated with agriculture but the Council has encouraged diversification and has its own industrial estates. There is a good labour market and sites are available for commercial and industrial expansion.

The Port of Wisbech trades actively and March remains an important rail link. The District is well placed to take advantage of development links with the EEC.

TOPOGRAPHY

The district is situated in the extreme north-west of Suffolk, adjoining Norfolk and Cambridgeshire.

The chalk heathlands of Newmarket in the South of the District, so ideal for horse racing, are in contrast to the Breckland landscape near Brandon, in the North, and the black peat fenlands which make up the District's border with Cambridgeshire.

The area possesses a rare charm, for it includes part of the Breckland as well as a large area of the great modern forest of Thetford Chase. The attractive villages amidst the farmlands, woods and rivers are set in a countryside where history can be traced from prehistoric times. The district, retains its unique character and has areas of considerable, unspoilt natural beauty.

The main town in the district is Newmarket, world renowned for its racing activities.

Mildenhall and Brandon are expanding towns and the continued attraction of carefully selected industries is one of the principal tasks of the authority.

TOPOGRAPHY

The area includes Lytham St. Annes, the holiday resort of the borough, situated on the River Ribble, which is a pleasant family seaside resort and residential town.

The Council provides adequate facilities for tennis, bowls, football, etc. in the several parks and gardens, including a miniature golf course on the South Promenade and at Fairhaven Lake.

There are four golf courses, over which practically every major British golfing event, including the Ryder Cup matches and the British Open Championship, has been played. Boating and yachting can be enjoyed at Fairhaven Lake and there are indoor pools at St. Annes and Kirkham. The foreshore stretches for some six-and-a-half miles and is interspersed with natural sand-dunes.

St. Annes is a fairly modern town, laid out on garden-city lines, with wide parallel streets and tree-lined avenues, whereas Lytham is much older and was listed in "The Domesday Book".

A large area of the borough is given over to agriculture including market gardening and amongst the many interesting towns and villages are the ancient towns of Kirkham and Wrea Green with its famous village green, village pump and duck pond. Within Fylde Borough are many important industrial complexes such as British Aerospace at Warton.

British Nuclear Fuels Limited have a large development at Salwick which is the only fuel element producing establishment in the country. On the same site, the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority has a research and development laboratory, whose main function is the research and development of fuel designs.

ERNIE, of Premium Bond fame, has been housed at St. Annes since its inception in 1975. Access to the borough by road is by the M6 Motorway and then a choice of routes via the M55 or the A583 and the A584, which bring travellers via Preston and then the coast road into Lytham St. Annes. There are railway stations at Kirkham, Moss Side, Lytham, Ansdell and St. Annes Squires Gate, linking the borough to Preston and the main lines to London and Edinburgh.

TOPOGRAPHY

Gillingham occupies a strategic position on the River Medway which led to the development of the Royal Navy Dockyard and associated military establishments from late 17th Century onwards. During the 19th Century railway links to London stimulated development and growth; by the middle of the century the population was over 14,500. In 1928 the adjoining village of Rainham, to the east of Gillingham, was incorporated into the Borough and now forms the easternmost part of the continuous urban area known as the Medway Towns. The M2 motorway borders the Borough along its southern periphery and provides direct links to London and the Channel ports. There is now very easy access on to the national motorway network by way of this motorway and the nearby M20. Up to 1984 the Navy Dockyard provided a major source of employment in Gillingham but its closure led to its division into three parts—a Historic Dockyard Trust in the west, a new roll-on roll-off port facility to the east and, in the centre part, the creation of a new redevelopment area known as Chatham Maritime. This area is now owned by English Estates and is to be redeveloped for a mixture of residential, employment, and leisure facilities which will combine to create a mini-new town with a high standard of design and landscaping and exploiting the unique setting and characteristics of the site. Proposals are also in hand to provide a third crossing of the River Medway and it is hoped that by 1993 a new tunnel will be open to traffic and will be linked soon afterwards to a major new relief road along the northern periphery of Rochester and Gillingham. In 1978 the Borough Council acquired former Services land and created the Gillingham Business Park which has been jointly developed with Grosvenor Developments to provide 2,000 new jobs in 50 companies represented at the Business Park, including Fuji Seal Europe, Tiffany Foods, Ameco Hydrospace/Plessey, and Hewi UK Ltd. Established employers in Gillingham include the chemical manufacturing firm of Akzo Chemie, the well known Jubilee hoseclips firm, CAV Lucas, and Crest Packaging (a management buyout from Bowater Packaging). The Council has directly supported business developments including the building of seed bed units for small firms, and sponsors several organisations working in the field of economic and business development. Extensive changes in the shopping pattern within the Borough have occurred in recent years. The most significant change was the development in 1978 of the Hempstead Valley Shopping Centre, soon to be enlarged, the building of a district centre at Rainham, and, also in 1979, the pedestrianisation of Gillingham High Street. Gillingham Business Park has also provided the opportunity for the creation of a small number of retail warehouses. The considerable potential of the area for leisure and tourism has been recognised and in recent years several major tourist attractions have been developed, these including Fort Amherst (a Napoleonic fortification set into the chalk hillside), the Royal Engineers Museum which depicts the work of the Sappers, Gillingham Ice Bowl (a regional ice skating facility), two Heritage Centres, a large regional sports centre called the Black Lion, and, under construction, a leisure pool at Cozenton Park, Rainham. The riverside and water potential of the Borough have also begun to be realised with the extension of marina facilities and the start of a country park scheme. The Borough features a wide range of housing, from modest terraced units to large executive houses. However, there is little potential for further built development and the remaining wedges of open space on the north, east and western edges of the Borough are seen as valuable elements of landscape for protection and enhancement.

TOPOGRAPHY

Glanford stretches from the River Trent in the west to the coast just north of Immingham in the east. The River Humber marks its northern limit, and the Borough extends some miles south of Kirton-in-Lindsey. Within this area of largely unspoiled countryside, including acres of high quality agricultural land, quiet villages, busy towns and thriving new industries harmoniously co-exist.

The Glanford Enterprise Zone at Flixborough, designated in 1984 and adjacent to the River Trent, with its numerous wharves, is now a major industrial estate. Other industrial sites are at Elsham Wold and important warehousing estate, close to the M180 and the prestigious Humber Bridge Industrial Estate at Barton-upon-Humber, where many small industries are housed in modern units built by Glanford Borough Council and English Estates. A 90-acre industrial estate has recently been completed at New Holland, close to riverside wharf facilities capable of taking ships of approximately 5,000 tonnes.

Glanford has an excellent communications: the M180 runs through the Borough linking to the national motorway network; Humberside Airport to the East of Brigg has numerous National and International Flights and Sea communications with the rest of Europe are provided by many wharves along the Humber and River Trent. The deep water ports of Hull and Immingham are nearby.

The Borough has an interesting historical heritage. Baysgarth Museum, in Barton, houses the King collection of porcelain (European and Oriental), besides displays of local archaeology, geology and social history. The Saxon church of St Peter's at Barton is one example of the many fine churches in the Borough; and the black background of the Glanford Shield is said to derive from the robes of the Augustinian monks of Thornton Abbey.

There are leisure and countryside activities: leisure centres at Brigg, Barton and Bottesford and facilities for golf, fishing, sailing, water skiing, windsurfing and walking. Elsham Hall is a beautiful country park, and the Barton Clay Pits also are a recently developed nature reserve and country park.

Glanford has many assets to commend it: a relaxed and attractive lifestyle, a full range of leisure amenities, relatively low house prices and excellent communications with the UK and the rest of Europe.

TOPOGRAPHY

Gloucester is the County town and major employment centre of Gloucestershire.

Since Roman times it has been an essential link in the communications pattern of the country, and before the opening of the Severn Bridge was the lowest crossing point on the River Severn. The city has however maintained its strategic position in the communications network. Adjacent the M5 motorway the city lies astride major routes between the North, the Midlands and the South West and Wales. Mid-way between Gloucester and Cheltenham lies Staverton Airport, jointly owned by the two Councils, which provides important services to the local and regional economy. The city also enjoys a good rail service, whilst Gloucester Docks is situated at the head of the Gloucester-Sharpness Canal, a key element in proposals for the Severn Corridor to improve passage between the Bristol Channel and the Midlands.

The city has a diverse industrial base, playing host to a number of major engineering companies. The city has also encouraged the development of an increasingly important small firms sector by various means including the recent opening of an Enterprise Workshop scheme.

As the county's administrative headquarters, the city has developed its office sector particularly in the field of insurance, with the arrival of several leading companies.

Situated in the midst of some of the finest countryside in the United Kingdom it is not surprising that agriculture and agricultural engineering also plays a very important role in the local economy. Indeed the livestock market at St. Oswalds Road is the second largest in England.

The city also boasts a modern shopping centre. Shoppers are served by a combination of multi-storey and surface car parks. Two multi-storeys are linked by roof-top parking areas above two major shopping developments.

Gloucester is an historic city with much to offer the resident and visitor alike. Tourism now plays an increasingly important role in its life. The Cathedral is one of the finest buildings in Europe and has been a major tourist attraction since it became the final resting place of Edward II in 1327. The scheme for the rehabilitation and development of the docks is proceeding apace and will add considerably to the city's tourist potential.

The city is firmly committed to the development of tourism. In addition to the Via Sacra, a pedestrian route linking the Cathedral and other ancient buildings, along the line of the Roman wall, including Greyfriars and Blackfriars Priors.

Along the Via Sacra are a number of interesting open spaces including Kings Square and Jubilee Gardens, a recent development to commemorate Gloucester's links with the aircraft industry.

The city is also a touring centre for the Cotswolds, the Severn Vale and Royal Forest of Dean. It offers a wide range of leisure, recreational and cultural pursuits based on its leisure centre, the Country Park at Robinswood Hill and its museums, arts centre and art galleries.

TOPOGRAPHY

Gosport is situated on the western side of Portsmouth Harbour and has a coastline of six miles to the Solent. It is reputed to have acquired its name as 'God's Port' in 1140, when Henry de Blois, Bishop of Winchester, took shelter from a storm in the harbour and so named it. The development of Gosport has been closely linked with the growth and requirements of the Royal Navy and this has been especially marked since the Second World War. Apart from Service establishments, there are some industries, including boat-building, electronics, radio, television and chemicals.

Its proximity to the Solent, temperate climate and clean air, make Gosport a very pleasant residential area. Gosport received a Charter of Incorporation in 1922, was extended in 1939 and has been granted Borough Status under Section 145 of the Local Government Act, 1972. The council carried out an extensive scheme of sea defence works at Lee-on-the-Solent which includes a low-level promenade along the entire length of the cliffs. Multi-storey flats and dwellings for old people have been erected in the central area of the town, severely damaged during the war, and on the water front to Portsmouth Harbour. A new Town Hall accommodating all departments, a Council Chamber and Mayoral Suite was completed in 1966 and in October 1973, a new Central Library was opened contained in a building of four floors and including a Music Library. The council owns public parks, children's playgrounds, one indoor swimming pool, one children's paddling pool, a Recreation Centre with Sauna and Fitness facilities and a model yacht lake on which national and international races are held. The council also constructed an esplanade and landing stage in Portsmouth Harbour to carry pedestrian ferry traffic between Gosport and Portsmouth and has established a yacht marina off the town quay. The gardens adjacent to the ferry landing stage are split into two. The Royan Gardens reflect Gosport's twin town of Royan in Charente-Maritime, France. The Falkland Gardens pay tribute to those members of the armed forces and civilians who gave their lives or were injured in the Falkland Islands Campaign, April-June 1982.

TOPOGRAPHY

Ranging from beside the Thames to the edge of the North Downs escarpment, Gravesham Borough is a varied area of industry, agriculture, commuter homes and picturesque villages. The bulk of the population is between the river and the A2 trunk road. Firm Metropolitan Green Belt policies protect the rural area. Within easy reach of London, the Borough looks both to the capital, its own resources and river position for its prominence—but is far enough away from London to have a character of its own. The M25 is close by with easy access to the 3 London airports. The Borough has 2 very successful Enterprise Zones.

The borough returns six members to serve on the Kent County Council.

TOPOGRAPHY

Unlike many ports, Great Grimsby is not dominated by its docks and industrial areas, but happily combines all the advantages of an urban community with the attractions of both the coast and countryside. The wide, tree-lined roads leading into the town, the spacious layout of its residential areas, the proximity of the lovely and unspoilt Lincolnshire Wolds and the attractions of nearby seaside resorts, all combine to add to the amenities of the town.

The Grimsby Travel to Work Area is designated an intermediate area to provide a stimulus over and above the many natural advantages of the area to further increased economic prosperity and buoyancy.

Although principally noted for its reputation as the country's premier fishing port, Grimsby has now become one of the leading centres in Europe for the food industry. It is known as 'Europe's Food Town'. This rapid expansion of the food industry has been accompanied by the construction of the A180(M) Link Road, which also serves to encourage increased trade through the port with the Scandinavian countries. There are large chemical factories and other industrial premises along the Humber bank, and the Grimsby area is now the country's main producing centre for titanium oxide. Great Grimsby is the hub of the industrial South Bank of Humberside and is a sub-regional shopping and commercial centre with a modern shopping precinct which is shortly to be extended and expanded in the form of the Alexandra Dock heritage project.

Leisure activities are also well catered for, by a leisure centre containing a whole range of features including indoor ice rink and bowling green. Work is shortly to start on extending the various amenities within Grimsby in the dock area which will include the creation of the National Fishing Heritage Centre. In the educational field, a wide range of schools and other educational establishments are under the control of the Humberside County Council. The Grimsby College of Technology and the Humberside College of Higher Education have worldwide reputations in food and refrigeration courses. Nationally famous orchestras and choirs appear regularly in Great Grimsby, and many other cultural activities take place. The council owns the covered market hall in the Riverhead Precinct, together with considerable industrial and commercial leasehold estates, and maintains several parks, woodlands and recreation grounds. Public buildings include the Town Hall, Municipal Offices, Leisure Centre, Swimming Baths and The Welholme Galleries (museum and art gallery). A modern Central Library and several branch libraries are under the control of Humberside County Council and provide a first class service to the reading public. There is a daily 125 railway service to King's Cross. Airport facilities are available at the nearby Humberside Airport.

Mayoral annual allowance: £1,820 plus £2,365 for Annual Council and Mayor's Sunday.

Twinning: Rambouillet (France).

TOPOGRAPHY

The Great Yarmouth borough has a coastal boundary of fifteen miles and extends inland for up to eight miles in an irregular shape. The coast has wide beaches of soft golden sand and much of the coastal area comprises holiday development in the form of caravan and chalet sites and holiday camps. The hinterland is mainly agricultural and embraces large tracts of open marshland in the basin of the Rivers Bure, Waveney and Yare. These rivers converge on the tidal Estuary of Breidton Water, which is a Local Nature Reserve, and connect with the Norfolk Broads.

The principal town in the district is Great Yarmouth, which is a well-known holiday resort providing extensive and varied holiday accommodation and a wide range of seaside attractions to cater for family holidays. The town has a modern shopping area, and contains a large open market, held on Wednesdays and Saturdays, offering a wide range of goods, especially fresh agricultural produce.

The Port of Great Yarmouth, previously famous for its herring fishery, has been substantially rebuilt and now serves as a major base for North Sea Gas and Oil exploration. The geographical situation of the port, being less than one hundred miles from the continent, and enjoying tidal conditions which permit access for twenty-four hours a day, has attracted increasing Roll-on/Roll-off traffic.

Great Yarmouth is a cultural centre for the area and accommodates most of the service industries. A wide range of light industrial activity, including frozen foods processing, furniture, paper pulp, electronics, engineering, boat-building and textiles is centred on the town, and is rapidly expanding.

In Roman times the Yare Basin was an inlet of the sea and the remains of the two large Roman forts each side of the old estuary, at Burgh Castle and Caister-on-Sea, are still visible. The town of Great Yarmouth has charters dating from 1208, and contains a number of fine houses and other historic buildings including the 11th century parish church and the 13th century toll house.

TOPOGRAPHY

The borough, which was granted a Royal Charter on 13 November 1973, comprises the former areas of the Guildford MB and Guildford RD.

Apart from the Borough itself Guildford is a rapidly developing portion of West Surrey. The beautiful rural area forming the eastern half of the borough is within the original Metropolitan Green Belt and most of the remainder has now been included in an extension to the Green Belt. Cultural and recreational facilities centred on Guildford include civic hall, museum, an art gallery and exhibition centre, professional orchestra, open-air swimming pool, pleasure grounds, a sports centre and a running track.

The Council made a grant of £36,300 to the Yvonne Arnaud Theatre during 1987/88 and runs the fully-professional Guildford Philharmonic Orchestra of the South East.

The Council has recently acquired some 280 acres of land to form a riverside park to the north of Guildford and a further 45 acres in Ash (RMC Lakes) for leisure purposes.

To the north of the cathedral on Stag Hill is the University of Surrey and on the Manor Farm site nearby the Royal Surrey County Hospital and the newly established Research Park.
